Realtor denies he spied for Soviets

Frank Sale, a former Canadian soldier the Toronto Sun claims was a spy for the Russians before retiring to sell real estate in Victoria, was not receiving media callers this morning.

But in a written statement he said the charges against him are groundless.

A woman who answered the door of his apartment made it clear the handwritten note was as close as Frank Sale wants to get to the press.

"He won't see you. He has nothing to say," she said, holding the door slightly ajar.

The woman, who refused to give her name, said Sale denies being a spy; says the Toronto Sun's copyright story labelling him as one is inaccurate and that the charges against him are groundless.

The woman laughed at the accusation that Sale had been recruited by the Russian intelligence service KGB after being caught changing money on the Moscow black market.

The Sun reported today that Sale had planted bugs, informed on the weaknesses of other embassy staff and drawn floor plans of 'secure' areas while he was serving at the Canadian embassies in Moscow and Peking.

The paper — which misspelled his name as 'Sales' and incorrectly stated that he operates a real estate business here — said the KGB rewarded Sale with sex and money.

The story said there was no hard evidence to back the accusation and that Sale retired from the armed services on pension.

"They just want something scandalous to sell their papers," the woman at the door said of the Toronto paper.

The woman produced a statement from Sale and handed it through the door.

It said: "In 1968 I was taken out of the military service and seconded to the department of external affairs. I have spent three years in Moscow and worked as a consular official and from there I was posted to Peking, when we established relations and I assisted setting up the embassy.

"In the later part of 1973 I was posted in Germany for a year, then I came back to Ottawa to complete my 20 years to qualify for a pension and to retire. (I was) voluntarily and honorably released from the armed forces.

"The accusations are without ground — the record stands as to my previous employment with the federal government.

Sale, who works for the Canada Permanent Trust Co., lives in a spacious groundfloor suite in a rambling old mansion on Moss Street . . . a quiet tree-lined Fairfield street; and that's the way Sale wants to keep it.

SPORTS CAR crash in Victoria claimed life of William Weldon, 37, of Parksville, Sunday afternoon. Police said vehicle went out of control on Oak Bay Avenue and struck concrete wall and a fence.

Twister mows over Ontario

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A tornado struck 16 buildings in an industrial area Sunday night during a severe thunderstorm that swept across southern Ontario, police said.

At Honey Harbour, Ont., Bruce Jarlette, 21, of Midland, Ont., was killed by lightning on a 26-foot cruiser on Georgian Bay.

Provincial police said Jarlette was standing beside a citizen's band radio when lightning struck the aerial. An autopsy will be held on Tuesday.

No injuries were reported in Brampton but police closed off the industrial area temporarily to allow Ontario Hydro workers to repair electrical lines.

The storm stretched from Georgian Bay to Windsor. About 20 millimetres of rain fell within half an hour at Toronto International Airport. Winds of 80 kilometres an hour were recorded at London, Ont.

Moustapha El Hassani of Brampton narrowly escaped death when lightning flashed over his head as he put buckets under the eavestroughs of his house. He then watched as a large tree at the rear of his home went up in flames.

"The firemen came and put it out," said El Hassani. "I should be dead."

"The sky looked very black, just like smoke — it sounded like a bomb or something," said Emenuel Aguiar of Brampton, who was driving in a lane adjoining his automotive business when the twister struck.

Police said industrial buildings in a 100-metre by 300-metre area were damaged. They did not estimate the amount of damage caused.

The twister smashed windows, ripped up roofs and blew out a section of wall 30 metres long at a Chubb Securities Ltd. building. It picked up a boat and dropped it 65 metres away.

A police spokesman said there were some people in the factories when the tornado ripped through but no injuries were reported.

Tom Carson of Melancthon Township said his barn was smashed and debris was carried more than 200 metres.

London, Ont., was also hit as the storm uprooted trees, throwing them against homes and cars, and ripped off roofs.

Herman Riegger said: "It couldn't have happened. It only lasted a second, there wasn't enough time."

From the front porch of his home he could see a tree trunk squashing a car, a house chimney being thrown down onto another car, the back stairway ripped from a house and wires and trees scattered everywhere.

Trucker protest turning uglier

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gunfire cracked over U.S. highways and a cattle truck was burned as angry independent truckers toughened their demands for a total shutdown of the trucking industry to protest rising fuel prices.

Six reports of sniper fire were under investigation by state police near Salt Lake City, where nails were found strewn over a canyon road Sunday.

Truck traffic had been all but shut down in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Utah, Tennessee and Montana by Sunday, organizers said.

In Montana, dozens of truckers stopped traffic on Interstate 90 west of Missoula. Some truck stops have been blocked since last week, said strike organizer Bob Whalen.

In other states, blocked truck stops created fuel shortages and discouraged many other haulers, organizers said.

The scattered shutdown has already been felt in some areas of the Midwest, where grain elevators were reported filling up and two meatpacking plants closed last week as haulers became scarce.

Meanwhile, Mike Parkhurst, president of the national Independent Truckers Association, said he will announce today what action his organizations, representing 30,000 drivers, will take.

The association is being pressed to lead a shutdown to protest against rising diesel prices and the 88-kilometre-an-hour speed limit.

Fighting flares up across Nicaragua

MANAGUA (AP) — Heavy fighting raged today in this Nicaraguan capital between President Anastasio Somoza's soldiers and Sandinista guerrillas trying to oust him.

The guerrillas also were reported battling Somoza's troops in the northern cities of Matagalpa, Esteli and Leon and harassing them in the south near Masaya and the Costa Rican border despite national guard claims of victory in the south.

Canadians have been advised by a Canadian diplomat to consider leaving the country, the external affairs department said today in Ottawa.

A department spokesman said the Canadian charge d'affaires in Costa Rica has informed the 45 Canadians remaining in Nicaragua to think of leaving or at least to arrange departure of their dependants. Canada has no embassy in Nicaragua; the embassy in Costa Rica is responsible for Nicaragua.

An attempt to evacuate about 50 U.S. citizens was called off today when heavy fighting blocked the airport road.

U.S. embassy officials said a truck sent to check whether a road to the airport was open ran into barricades of cars and heavy gunfire from both sides.

"The rebels are stopping cars, ordering the drivers out at gunpoint, then lining the cars up across the road," one official said. "There's shooting coming from both sides out there."

U.S. state department spokesman Tom Reston announced in Washington that embassy staff members have been ordered to send their dependents out of the country, and non-essential employees of the embassy also will leave. He said there were about 60 dependents, that some have already left and about 30 would go today.

IT'S TERRIBLE! THE ONLY BOMBS I'VE SEEN IN A LONG TIME HAVE BEEN MOVIES.

Harmony halt

BLAINE (CP) — About 5,000 people gathered at the Canada-United States border Sunday to commemorate peace and goodwill between the two countries, but some of the motorists caught up in the festivities didn't share the feeling of harmony.

At one point, the lineup of northbound vehicles waiting to cross the border stretched five kilometres.

Among those participating in the annual event were boy scouts, girl guides and war veterans.

Helmet decision puzzler

Bikers who took advantage of the ruling and hot weather to remove their helmets during the weekend found police in various cities were approaching the problem differently.

Police in Vancouver and the Fraser Valley didn't ticket bareheaded riders, but police in Victoria, Kelowna and Penticton did.

Provincial authorities were to meet today to consider the decision made by Burnaby Provincial Judge Selwyn Romilly and to decide whether to appeal.

Neil McDiarmid, associate deputy attorney-general, said he would discuss the ruling with motor vehicle branch officials before making a decision.

Romilly declared a section of the B.C. Motor Vehicle Act requiring motorcyclists to wear helmets null and void because no helmets have been officially approved for use in the province.

Beef to top $3.50

EDMONTON (CP) — Beef will cost an average of $3.51 a pound by 1981, calculations prepared by the Canadian Cattlemen's Association show.

In addition, the figures show that Canadians will be eating less beef than they have for many years, but will be paying out a bigger part of their income to buy it.

Massive fines, jail, in dredging fraud

TORONTO (CP) — Five prominent Canadian businessmen were sentenced to jail terms of two to five years today for their roles in defrauding public agencies of more than $4.3 million between 1967 and 1976 by rigging bids on dredging contracts.

Mr. Justice William Parker, associate chief justice of the Ontario Supreme Court, also sentenced eight companies to pay fines totalling more than $6.5 million for the parts they played.

The five businessmen had been charged along with six other businessmen and 11 of their companies with conspiracy to commit fraud by rigging bids for government dredging contracts.

The eight companies and five businessmen were found guilty May 5 following one of the longest, most complicated and costliest cases — estimated at $7 million — ever tried by a Canadian jury.

Harold McNamara, 64, former president of McNamara Corp. Ltd. of Toronto and a former sports writer for Montreal Gazette, was sentenced to five years and his company was fined $2 million. Both had been found guilty on all seven counts handed down in the Crown's indictment.

Jean Simard, 57, a former vice-chairman of Marine Industries Ltd. of Montreal and a member of the family that played a major role in Quebec's shipbuilding and construction industries, was sentenced to a three-year prison term. Simard was found guilty on three counts. The company, acquitted on one count, was fined $650,000 on the other two.

Sydney Cooper, 58, former president of Pitts Engineering and Construction Ltd. of Toronto, drew a three-year prison term for three guilty verdicts he faced. The jury could reach no decision on a fourth count.

Albert Gill, senior vice-president of Sceptre Dredging Ltd. of Richmond, and Frank Hamata, the company's president, each received reformatory terms of two years less a day. Both men and the company were found guilty on one count. The company was fined $450,000.

Other sentences handed down: Canadian Dredge and Dock Co. Ltd. of Toronto was fined $1 million; The J. P. Porter Co. Ltd. of Montreal was fined $1 million; Richelieu Dredging Corp. Inc. of Montreal, a Porter subsidiary, was fined $500,000; Pitts Engineering Construction Ltd. of Toronto was fined $1 million; C. A. Pitts General Contractors Ltd. of Toronto was fined $50,000.

The multi-million dollar fines were among the highest ever levied by a court in Canada.

Defence lawyers planned to make applications for bail pending their appeal applications. A bail hearing was set for later today.

In passing sentence, Mr. Justice Parker said the business world and the public must realize that such illegal acts will be dealt with seriously. He said people must be made to realize that such acts are not worth while.

Although he said he was aware of the large amount of publicity that surrounded the case, the length of the trial and its high cost, Mr. Justice Parker said that "the public has been defrauded and put to great expense to bring these accused to trial."

He said evidence at the

Vic Press pact ratified

The five newspaper unions at Victoria Press have ratified three-year contracts which provide for a compounded wage increase of 27 per cent.

However, hopes that Vancouver's two daily newspapers would be back on the street early next week were dashed Sunday when pressmen voted to reject a tentative settlement reached early Saturday morning.

Tentative agreements at Victoria Press were reached June 2 and ratification votes were held during the past week by the unions representing about 340 employees.

Victoria Press publishes the Times and Daily Colonist.

The contracts provide for a nine-per-cent increase retroactive to Dec. 1, 1978, another eight per cent Dec. 1 of this year and eight per cent Dec. 1, 1980.

The agreements expire Nov. 30, 1981.

Members of the International Typographical Union, the printers, get a four-day, 35-hour work week based on an 8¾-hour day. However, there were some trade-offs in exchange for the shorter week, one of them being a $15-a-week cut in the first-year wage increase.

The printers, as well as members of the other craft unions, pressmen, mailers and stereotypers, get a dental plan as well as improvements in sick leave provisions.

The fifth union involved is The Newspaper Guild representing editorial, business office, advertising and maintenance employees.

In Vancouver, about 85 of the 100 members of the Printing Pressmen's local at Pacific Press, which produces the morning Province and the evening Sun, voted 74 per cent against the contract.

Earlier in the day, the Vancouver Mailer's Union voted 59 to 10 to accept it. Four other unions still had not voted.

The proposed contract calls for a 35 per cent wage increase over 40 months.

Sun publisher Clark Davey, when asked what happens next, mentioned a labor code provision that would allow the provincial government to impose a formal joint council of unions made up of those that have accepted the contract, as long as they represent a majority of workers.

Labor Minister Alan Williams said today he cannot see the provincial government forcing a majority settlement in the way suggested by Davey.

Heroin treatment program rapped

REGINA (CP) — Mandatory treatment of heroin addicts is not the best solution, a British Columbia official told members of the Saskatchewan criminology and corrections association.

"When we outlaw a state of being, we create a very difficult social dilemma," John Ekstedt, senior policy advisor for the B.C. attorney-general, said.

"We have outlawed the substance (heroin); now we are saying we want to outlaw being addicted to it."

Ekstedt said forcing individuals to take treatment infringes on their civil rights.

In B.C., an addict can be referred for treatment by a relative or friend, by police or by court order.

An assessment panel then decides if a person needs treatment.

In theory, a person chooses whether to take treatment once the panel decides it's needed, "but he really doesn't have a choice," said Ekstedt.

Arab terrorist given 4 life terms in U.K.

LONDON (AP) — Arab terrorist Fahad Mihyi has been given four life sentences at the Old Bailey criminal court for a gun and grenade attack on an El Al airline crew last August in fashionable Mayfair.

Jerusalem-born Mihyi, 22, was found guilty of the murder of stewardess Irit Gidron, attempting to murder another girl named as Miss Arnon, possession of a machine-gun and of causing an explosion.

He was accompanied by another terrorist who either blew himself up in the attack or was killed in one of the grenade explosions caused by Mihyi.

Prosecutor Henry Pownall told a jury that Mihyi, a member of the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, caused pandemonium in his noon ambush as the crew alighted from a coach outside the Europa hotel.

Six members of the public who had been sitting in the sun enjoying a lunchtime drink outside the Barley Mow public house also were wounded as they were swept in a hail of machine-gun bullets and fragments from the grenades, Pownall said.

Miss Gidron was killed by bullets fired from the other terrorist's gun, which he still clutched in his hand when he was found dead.

Mihyi told the jury his parents had been killed by Israelis. He denied any knowledge of the second man but said he had been ordered to kill an Israeli air crew and had been briefed in Beirut and told how to use the weapons by a man called Tariq.

Myhyi said he flew into Heathrow airport near London with the weapons from the Middle East two weeks before the raid.

He said fingerprints of the dead man found on a newspaper he was carrying must have been planted there by the police.

But the court held it was a concerted attack by the two men.

Nicaragua erupts

Reston said the embassy will inform the other U.S. citizens in Nicaragua of its action, "but we are not advising them to leave." He said there were about 3,000 U.S. citizens in the country when the rebels launched their current offensive two weeks ago, but U.S. officials believe many have left.

Firing continued into Sunday night and early today. Tracer bullets from .50-calibre machine-guns were seen from the Intercontinental Hotel next to Somoza's fortified military headquaters, called The Bunker.

Lights were out in large parts of the city. From the hotel roof, large sectors in the west and southwest were dark except for the occasional streak of tracer bullets.

Sandinista sources said many civilians had been killed in heavy fighting with the guard in 10 barrios, or poor neighborhoods, of the capital.

The Red Cross said it has heard reports that many bodies were in the streets, but it could not send its ambulances out to pick up the wounded and dead because it was too dangerous.

trial indicated that bid rigging was a common practice in the dredging industry.

He said he would not impose the prison terms of nine to 12 years against McNamara, Simard and Cooper recommended by the Crown because such terms almost would amount to life sentences in view of their ages.

Crown Attorney Rod McLeod repeatedly had said that stiff multi-million dollar fines and harsh jail sentences were needed in order to deter other businessmen from rigging bids.

He said harsh penalties would keep intact the public's confidence in the business world and the Canadian justice system.

Defence lawyers, however, had argued that their clients already had been harshly punished through the highly publicized process and shame of being charged, tried and convicted. They said the process in effect has put the business world on notice.

The jury had been on the case 14½ months and deliberated for almost one month before returning with 49 verdicts.

Court had been told the executives had inflated the cost of dredging jobs by agreeing in advance among themselves on how much each would bid. The winning company would then pay off the others, the prosecution charged.

Mr. Justice Parker presided over 36 weeks of testimony, three weeks of defence and Crown addresses and his own 11-day charge to the jury.

Acquitted following the trial that began Feb. 13, 1978, were: Gerard Filion, 69, of St. Bruno, Que., former president of Marine Industries Ltd.; Hugh Martin, 64, of Vancouver, chairman of the board of Canadian Dredge and Dock Co. Ltd.; James Jarrell of Toronto, vice-president of Pitts Engineering; Louis Rochette, 54, of Quebec City, former executive vice-president of Marine Industries; and Bruno Desjardins of Bale d'Urfe, Que., former director of J. P. Porter.

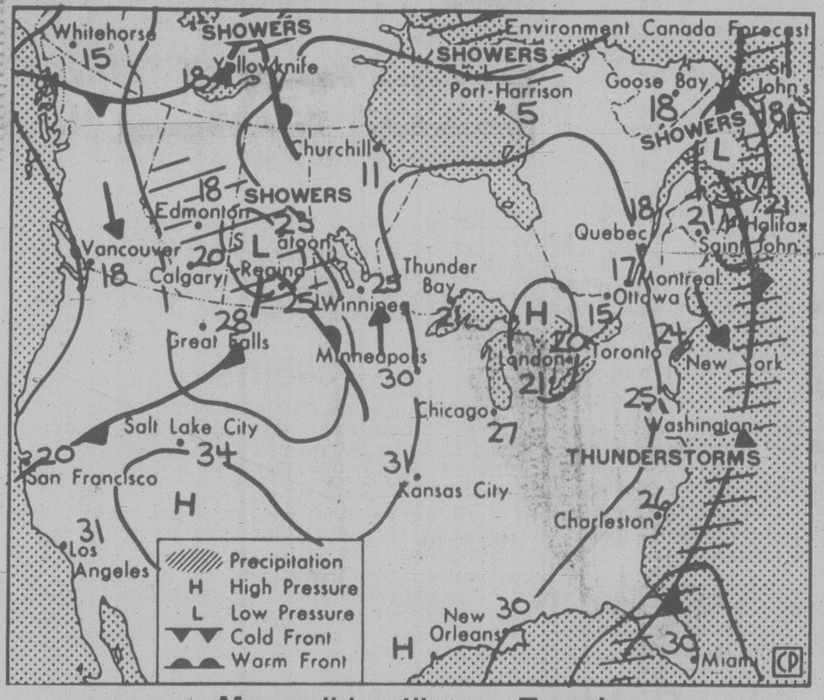

Map valid until noon Tuesday

A weak airstream originating from the southwest will continue to bring warm air with some high cloudiness over the southeastern portion of the province today. A large area of cool unstable air just west of the Charlottes is slowly pushing its way southeastward and will engulf the entire province by late Tuesday. Mostly sunny skies frequently interrupted by cloudy periods with a few showers on the outer coasts should describe the general conditions for the the next few days. Temperatures will continue to decrease as the province moves deeper into the cooler air.

BIRDS OF a feather were actress Elizabeth Taylor and singer Robert Merrill, who both received American-Israeli Arts, Sciences and Humanities awards Sunday in New York. A kiss seals the bond.

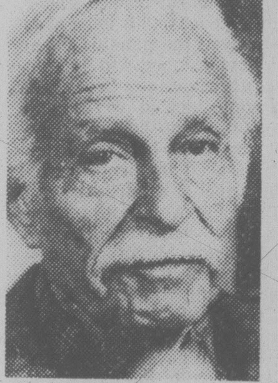
Woman wins record jackpot

A southern California woman who grew tired of dancing Sunday won $280,000 in Las Vegas — the largest slot machine jackpot in history. Judi Hansen, 32, of Santa Ana, said she went to the resort with nine or 10 other women to dance Sunday morning, but decided to play the slots when she grew weary of dancing.

Pope John Paul ended an emotional nine-day visit to his native Poland and returned to the Vatican on Sunday. Before leaving Poland, the Pope said a "new evangelization" has begun in Communist-ruled Poland; and, in Winnipeg, Ukrainian nationalist Valentyn Moroz said the Pope had given new hope to dissidents living under Communist rule.

Bloodied by salt water and pounded by four-metre waves, Stella Taylor, the 48-year-old marathon swimmer from Fort Lauderdale,Sunday was forced to abandon her third attempt to swim to Florida from the Bahamas.

The Boston Globe quotes U.S. Senator Edward Kennedy as saying he would probably run for president in 1980 if President Carter withdrew. Meanwhile, a New York Times-CBS poll says President Carter's popularity is at an all-time low of 30 per cent, but Carter's mother Lillian says she doesn't doubt her son would be re-elected if he runs for a second term.



FIEDLER
. . . another attack

Boston Pops conductor Arthur Fiedler was reported in stable condition today and resting comfortably after suffering what was described as a "mild heart attack" this weekend.

The Maestro, 84, who has suffered four other heart attacks, is expected to remain hospitalized for several more weeks.

Fiedler has made several trips to the hospital since late last year. He underwent brain surgery last December and was also admitted to the hospital for exhaustion about six weeks ago when he fainted after a Boston Pops performance.

And in Draneville, Ga., Billy Carter, the president's brother, was back in the news today after it was learned the mortgagee of his home had foreclosed. Carter moved his family to Draneville from Plains, Ga., two years ago to escape tourists, and had new house renovated substantially.

Atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair failed today in a bid to have the U.S. Supreme Court ban the inscription "In God We Trust" on all U.S. coins. O'Hair was one of two that led to the Supreme Court's 1963 ban on Bible reading and recitation of prayers in public schools, had asked the justices to declare the national motto unconstitutional.

Judd Caplovich of Vernon, Conn., says his friends consider him "strange and eccentric" for his old typewriter collection. About 90 per cent of his 525 typewriters were made before 1910.

Newfoundland Liberal Leader Don Jamieson, unable to speak after 10 days of campaigning, rested his voice in St. John's Sunday on the eve of a televised debate tonight with two other party leaders one week before Newfoundlanders vote in a general election June 18.

Role problems are creating great tension for Canadian women, says Dr. Margaret Fulton, president of Mount St. Vincent University in Halifax. She said women must get on with making it in what used to be considered a man's world, adding that women make up 61 per cent of Canada's psychiatric population and that a total of seven million Canadian women are dependent on prescription drugs and alcohol.

Bela Korchnoi, wife of exiled Soviet chess master Viktor Korchnoi said in Moscow the couple's 20-year-old son Igor is in imminent danger of arrest for evading the Soviet military draft and she appealed to the West for help.

Actor John Wayne, waiting to begin a new course of cancer treatment, has sold his 45-metre-long yacht for about $1 million, a Los Angeles yacht broker said. Wayne bought the boat, a converted minesweeper called Wild Goose, about 15 years ago and spent more than $1 million on improvements, the broker said. The vessel has five cabins for passengers and a large dining area and needs a crew of eight to sail her. The buyer, a lawyer, has promised Wayne the actor can sail the Wild Goose whenever he wishes, the broker added.

Shah, family moving to Mexico

MEXICO CITY (WP) — The deposed shah of Iran and a few members of his family arrived in Mexico from the Bahamas Sunday in a move arranged by former U.S. secretary of state Henry Kissinger.

Kissinger came here Saturday to be on hand for the shah's arrival, according to Mexican official sources.

Three months earlier, Kissinger made a trip to Mexico, ostensibly to give some speeches, but really to pave the way for the shah, the sources said.

Kissinger is known to have been angered by the U.S. reluctance to give asylum to a longtime ally and he and his wife, Nancy, have visited the shah in his exile on Paradise Island in the Bahamas, where the shah has been staying since March 30.

In April, the new Iranian government warned that relations with Mexico would be affected if the shah was allowed to enter.

A government spokesman here then declared, "We are not going to allow any government or country to dictate our policy."

Kissinger has been lobbying the Mexicans on behalf of the shah since "the day the shah left Iran," the sources said.

He discussed the shah's eventual move to Mexico with former foreign minister Santiago Roel, but it was President Jose Lopez Portillo who decided to welcome the shah "a few months ago" — to welcome him and give him a six-month visa, the sources said.

They added that David Rockefeller, chairman of Chase Manhattan Bank, also had intervened with the Mexicans on behalf of Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The private jet carrying the shah landed Sunday afternoon at the hangar of Mexico's largest banking chain, Banco Nacional de Mexico, whose president is a friend of Rockefeller's.

There has been much speculation here about where the shah would live in Mexico.

A large group of reporters and curious Sunday spent the day at Acapulco airport, where the shah was expected to arrive.

It had been rumored that he would move into the house bought by his older sister, Princess Shams, in Acapulco last year. But the house, which is being remodelled, will not be ready for some time.

Another house under construction next door, registered in the name of an Italian baron, is believed to be the future home for the shah, to be ready in December.

It is an immense, fortress-like building with a watchtower, private beach annd dock and three swimming pools - and reportedly cost $4 million.

The shah, accompanied by his wife, the former empress Farah, and several other persons left Mexico City airport in a car. They were reportedly heading for Cuernavaca, a fashionable residential townsouth of Mexico City.

According to well-placed sources, the shah has rented two houses in Cuernavaca, but they refused to diclose their location.

"The idea is to keep this quiet for awhile," a Mexican friend of the Kissingers said.

This is not the shah's first visit to Mexico. He and his wife were here for a week on an official state visit in May 1975.

The Mexican foreign minister said last week that the shah would make his own security arrangements and the Mexican government would assume no responsibility for his safety.

Iranian judicial authorities have declared that the shah is guilty of crimes against the Moslem people and that anyone who assassinates him would be carrying out the people's verdict.

Euro-parliament voting indicates swing to right

BRUSSELS (AP) — Christian Democrats and Socialists were running neck and neck today in returns that showed a swing to the right in the election of the first European parliament chosen by direct vote of the people.

On the basis of almost final results from six of the members of the European Economic Community and computer projections for Britain, Ireland and the Netherlands, which complete their tallies today, the big gainer was as the conservative bloc. The Socialists had sharp losses and the Communists slight gains.

The Christian Democrats or the Socialists may emerge as the largest single bloc in the new, 410-member parliament with the Conservatives placing a strong third and the Communists fourth. No single faction will get a majority.

The European Broadcasting Union, with links to networks in all nine Common Market countries, today issued this projected distribution of seats in the new Parliament:

Christian Democrats 111, Socialists 111, Conservatives 64, Liberals 35, Progressive Democrats 23, ecologists and other splinter groups 23.

The returns also indicated support for the concept of European unity.

N-valve kicks up

WATERFORD, Conn. (AP) — The Millstone II nuclear power plant was being shut down today after "mildly radioactive steam" was found spewing from a leaky valve in the reactor core water system, officials said.

The shutdown, begun Sunday, did not pose any radiation hazard to the public or workers at the plant, said Anthony Nericcio, a spokesman at Millstone II, owned by Northeast Utilities, of Berlin, Conn., while a spokesman for the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission described the leak as routine.

Tough talk, then grins

ALEXANDRIA, EGYPT (UPI) — Egyptian and Israeli leaders clashed publicly today over the status of the Gaza Strip and the West Bank of the Jordan, but relaxed into smiles and shook hands after the first business session of negotiations on Palestinian autonomy.

They also chided each other about public statements which they said were not conducive to progress in the talks.

In Jerusalem, Israel today rejected U.S. and Egyptian criticism of its settlement drive in occupied Arab territory and the state-run radio hinted its negotiators could walk out of the Alexandria autonomy talks if attacks on Prime Minister Menachem Begin continue.

The clash broke out shortly after Egyptian and Israeli negotiators, shepherded by the United States, met in Alexandria to begin a search for common ground to establish Palestinian autonomy in the Israeli-occupied Jordan West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

"Israel never undertook an obligation to build settlements in Eretz Israel," said Interior Minister Josef Burg, using the Hebrew words for the biblical land of Israel.

"These are territories occupied by force," replied Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil. "They are not Eretz Israel."

A fundamental question

The question was posed by Sgt. Bryan Bailey who told the board that before sensible discussions can be held on possible changes in Victoria's policing methods, the decision must be made: What is an acceptable level of crime for Victoria?

Not, it must be emphasized, an ideal level of crime. That, of course, would be zero. But since that can never be achieved, the question is: What can the community tolerate in terms of crime in return for less crimes of the sort that it can't tolerate? Once that decision has been made, said Bailey, rational planning can begin to deploy police forces in the way most likely to meet those community standards.

He's right.

For instance, Victoria police now respond to virtually every complaint they receive — broken car antennas, naked people walking on beaches, drunks staggering about roads, along with serious complaints of assaults, break-and-enters and robberies. The result is that just about every Victoria policeman is busy all the time responding to complaints; he doesn't have time to do much crime prevention or become involved in special apprehension projects that might reduce the crime rate.

One obvious solution to this problem would obviously be to add a few dozen more officers to the police force, providing enough manpower to respond to all complaints and to run the special projects. That, however, is a very expensive solution, at least, until the projects began to show some results. It would probably result in a significant increase in city property taxes.

Victoria citizens might choose to pay extra taxes for that extra police protection, were they asked. Or, they might decide that they preferred police to respond to every call rather than embark on new projects that might or might not be successful.

Or, they might decide that the best use of the policeman's time was working on ways to reduce the number of serious crimes such as breaking-and-entering or purse-snatching. They would agree that policemen should not have to respond to calls about drunks sleeping on the sidewalk or broken car antennas. That would free a good deal of police time for programs aimed at preventing crime, at encouraging better security for homes and businesses, for dealing with juvenile delinquents.

Each of those decisions would automatically lead to a different method of policing in Victoria. The police board and administration would implement the structure that would lead to meeting the citizens' goals.

Regrettably, nobody answered the fundamental question at the police board meeting. Nobody suggested that a way should be found to let the community have a say in determining an "acceptable" level of crime.

The board discussion dragged on for almost three hours without accomplishing anything. It is time the board and the citizens of Victoria begin to consider that basic question.

A memorial

The negligence verdict in the death of 11-year-old Renee Smith at Alert Bay can cheer no one. It is an unfortunate incident near the end of Dr. Jack Pickup's career as the isolated village's only medical practitioner for more than three decades.

It illustrated in glaring detail the pressures piled upon a physician in such a position. It has exacerbated feelings of hostility between whites and Indians. It has exposed a small town hospital with staff pitted against each other, and patient care suffering as a result.

Above all, with other similar incidents in the past, it has shown that British Columbia still has not managed to provide adequate health care to its small towns and rural areas. Nothing can bring back Renee Smith to her parents, but if her death spurs the government and the medical profession to redouble their efforts to find some solution to this chronic problem, it will be an appropriate memorial.

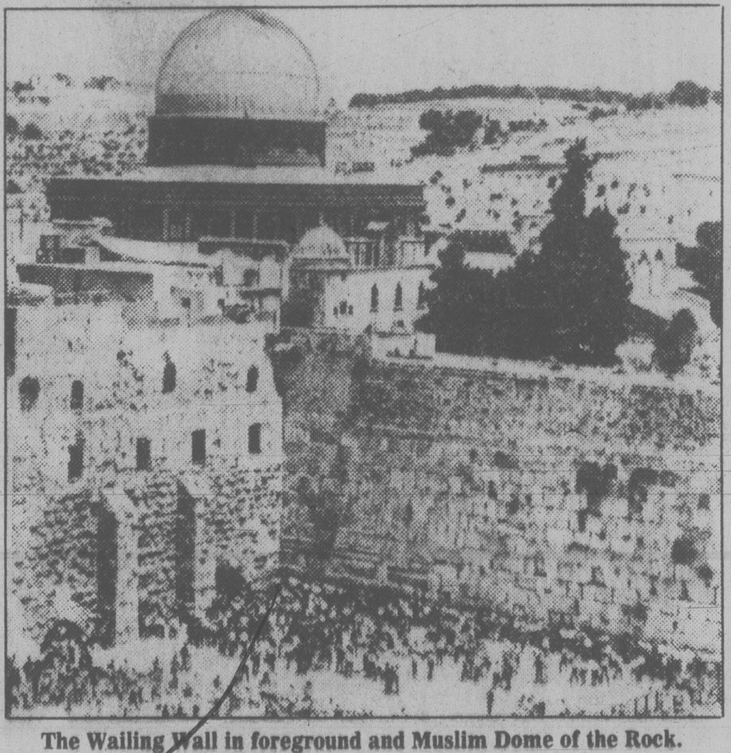
Diplomatic tongue-swallow

OTTAWA — To walk out to the far end of a long, slender branch and jump up and down is an act of considerable chutzpah. But dumb.

Prime Minister Joe Clark did his dumb chutzpah act last week by saying, of his plan to move our embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem, "We certainly intend to do it" and by then, adding, which was the jumping up and down part, "Questions like these are now beyond discussion as to their appropriateness."

External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald now is using a combination of diplomatic tongue-swallowing and of a political safety net to edge Clark back to safety. While, "committed to the principle," says MacDonald, "the question is timing [which] will be worked out in consultation with the countries concerned." To fully consult everyone, from Oman to the Sudan, should, with luck, carry us well into the 1980s.



The Wailing Wall in foreground and Muslim Dome of the Rock.

Complications

It does seem a bit hard to knock Clark for actually attempting to fulfill an election promise. Further, it is quite facile to suppose that Clark's only motive is to prove that he is tough enough to make the buck stop at his desk. Clark's supposed lack of toughness is strictly a media invention.

Clark deserves to be knocked for quite a few other reasons. Originally, he didn't fully grasp what he was doing. He blurted out the promise in mid-campaign, at the urging of Manpower Minister Ron Atkey, in order to win Jewish votes. Later, in between becoming prime minister and holding his press conference, Clark didn't bother to brief himself on the subject.

Arab counter-measures have attracted the most public attention. Clearly, Clark underestimated these. Yet to have calculated what may happen to Canada, all anyone needed to do was to have considered what now is happening to Egypt as retribution for signing a peace treaty with Israel: 18 Arab nations have broken off diplomatic relations with Cairo, $1.4 billion of oil-financed industrial projects in Egypt have been terminated while another $1.7 billion worth of grants has been halted.

An oil embargo against Canada isn't likely to be attempted because it can be circumvented so easily (little Rhodesia survived without difficulty), but our $1.3 billion worth of exports to Arab countries would be endangered.

True, to bow to blackmail isn't pleasant. True as well, we've begun to bore even ourselves by always being the international nice guy. It's true, lastly, that Israel claims Jerusalem as its capital, and we station our diplomats in every other national capital.

The real truth is that Jerusalem is far more than a national capital. It is, no matter the occupier of the moment, the Romans once, the Jews today, an international city.

In the beautiful phrase of retired Canadian diplomat Jim George, Jerusalem is "the centre of the Jewish psyche." As well, it has shaped the psyches of Christians and of Moslems.

For Christians, Jerusalem is the place where God's Son was crucified, was buried and was resurrected. For Jews, it is the site of Solomon's temple, of the ark of the convenant of Moses, of the Wailing Wall, of Jacob's ladder, of Abraham's sacrifice. For Moslems, it is the place where Mohammed was taken up to heaven to be given God's revelation which he returned to Mecca to preach.

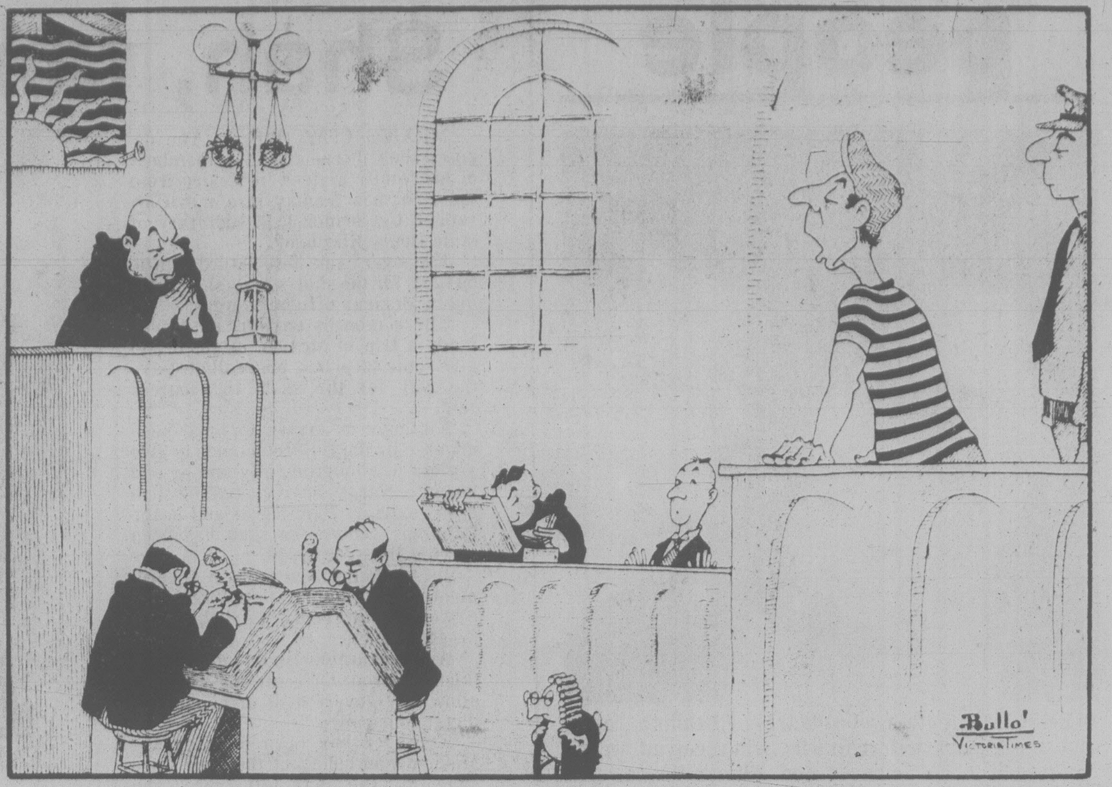
Jerusalem thus, its historic core, Mount Moriah and Golgotha, belongs to the world. A settlement making the Holy City an international city, for which Canada has voted many times at the United Nations, may be almost impossible to achieve, yet without it no lasting settlement is possible.

As a bargaining counter, Canada's decision where to site our embassy is by no means negligible. "Hail Canada," ran the headline in the Israeli daily Maariv. By being the first to move from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem (the embassies of Holland and of 12 South American countries now in Jerusalem were there from the beginning), we would "move beyond rhetoric," as Clark has put it, in our recognition of Israel's right to exist. At the same time, we would put pressure on other western countries to similarly translate high-minded principle into practice.

Put the pressure on

The fundamental flaw in Clark's policy is that he isn't bargaining. He's just throwing our counter away. He's just making a gesture, even if it is in itself a rather admirable one.

Simply to move our embassy is one thing. Quite another is to use our firm intention to move the embassy to pressure Israel and the Arab countries equally to accept an international settlement for the Holy City. The difference between these policies is the difference between walking out on a limb alone, and leading the crowd by example.



"... yer honor, I was misguided into a life of crime by the reports of inadequate police coverage in Victoria ..."

BRUCE HUTCHISON

When Clark meets reality

Now that the tumult and the shouting have died, we should be able to see that the recent election decided nothing more than the identity of a new government. This, to be sure, is a big decision and it makes Joe Clark one of the most important men in our history since he will lead us through our most dangerous times. But no specific issue was settled at the polls, no policy adopted, no government equipped with enough power to meet Canada's needs.

The confusion of the public mind, its lack of confidence in either of the political parties, or even in itself, are all mathematically recorded.

Majority needed

A government winning more votes than the opposition was defeated because the nation wanted a change and, above all, the removal of Pierre Trudeau. Clark carried most of the English-speaking regions but only two Quebec seats and is gravely, if not fatally, handicapped for a task requiring strength in both the two great Canadian communities. The worst result of the election, indeed, is the Conservative party's rejection by the Quebec people, not on grounds of policy but of ancient prejudice and bitter folk memories.

Out of a polarized mishmash only two facts have clearly emerged.

First, the minority Clark government cannot govern as it wishes to govern until it wins a majority in Parliament and at least a credible presence in French Canada. When its survival depends from day to day on the whims of New Democratic Party and Social Credit votes, the government can be expected to call another election and seek a real mandate within a year or so, hoping to repeat John Diefenbaker's 1958 sweep. The probable life span of our newly-elected Parliament is short, its chance of happiness and achievement slight.

Second, the Clark government will not do, in office, what it planned in opposition. No government ever does. By an iron law of politics the pre-election scenario is always rewritten and often reversed by the post-election facts.

Thus, for example, Clark must now regret his belated discovery of Maynard Keynes, his rush of economics to the head and his touching faith in bigger deficits as a sovereign remedy for a nation already rich while it complains of poverty.

The Clark budget next autumn should look very different from the careless raptures of the political campaign and, one must hope, much more realistic, much less calculated to ignite a final inflationary bonfire. In no partisan sense of the word the new government will probably begin to enforce the kind of conservative policy rejected in the campaign when the Trudeau government tried to follow it after a decade of reckless extravagance.

No doubt a similar change of thought will distinguish Clark's actions from his speeches in matters more vital than finance or economics. He has to refine his too simplistic attitude on relations between the two communities and on the redivision of federal and provincial power generally. Like all prime ministers he will not, and should not, be bound by his earlier assumptions, especially when he cannot dominate a Quebec whose future rests with Rene Levesque and Claude Ryan.

Apart from these strictly Canadian issues, Clark's whole program, however sound it may be, is at the mercy of international events that he cannot seriously influence.

On the joyous morrow of the election he may have paused long enough to read the warning of James Schlesinger, American secretary of energy, that the western world risks a crisis "as bad as the Great Depression" unless it cuts its use of scarce oil. And even a mild recession in the United States, as widely predicted, would invalidate any neat economic blueprint in Canada.

If nothing is certain here, or anywhere, we have invested perhaps more than we realize in a self-styled ordinary Canadian, a small-town boy suddenly writ large, a born political animal, a unique prime minister — unique because he is young, inexperienced and quite unlike his Conservative predecessors; unique, too, because his old and tired Liberal enemies won the election for him.

A unique leader

But the youth of the chosen leader, his willingness to learn, his quiet courage that survived the pundits' cheap sneers, his obvious good will and sincerity are great assets. He needs them, and some luck as well, in the hazardous gamble now beginning.

Anyone who wants him to fall and relishes his assured prospects of trouble must be a fool or a partisan more than a patriot. For we are all passengers on his ship, whether we like it or not. The sea ahead is stormy, the crew untrained, the compass erratic and the port not yet in sight. To him, then, and to us, bon voyage. But we had better not expect it to be brief or easy when the times, and the governing system, are temporarily out of joint.

Out of context

I am writing in reply to Ruth Guild's letter of June 5 headed Speed Kills.

I am pleased that she agrees seat belts are necessary in her statement: "Get rid of the hazards and seat belts will not be necessary, let alone mandatory."

I do believe you took some of my statements out of context when you stated that speed is not relevant. The point I endeavored to make was that the higher the speed the greater the impact would be at the points of the body which were in contact with the seat belt.

A point with which I didn't contend was the many thousands of foot-pounds of force that three unrestrained rear seat passengers would place on the front seat which would greatly add to the impact of a person restrained by a seat belt. Again the problem is I don't know what happened in this accident, therefore one can only hypothesize.

A study of accident reports in a province which has not yet enacted seat belt legislation revealed that those who wore seat belts had four times the survival rate and 1½ times better chance of not being injured. Perhaps drivers who wear seat belts, or safety belts as I like to refer to them, are more safety conscious defensive drivers, therefore, the statistics I quoted above could be inflated to a degree.

I agree that we need to pay greater heed to those who violate our traffic laws, speeders included. However, perhaps it is demoralizing to the police to ticket offenders only to find that little or nothing happens in the form of a penalty.

Impaired drivers, likewise are of great concern to your safety council. I represent the safety council on the Greater Victoria Counterattack Committee and fully support their program.

Fortunately the motor vehicle task force is concerned with both these points you have raised. I can assure you that the safety council took considerable time to prepare a submission to the motor vehicle task force. I hope that you as a private citizen took advantage of the opportunity to voice your concern and make your suggestions for improvement. — K. J. Wyatt, Manager, Capital Region Safety Council, 1767 Island Highway.

Dual portfolio

I hear that some Legion people are upset by Allan McKinnon holding both the defence and veterans' affairs portfolios.

I have talked to some of the wives of disabled veterans in Jubilee Hospital and find them quite pleased with the situation.

Allan McKinnon, while in opposition, had great sympathy for these people and did all he could to help them.

Is it not logical that the man in contact with people in the defence forces would not be the best person to continue to look after these same people when they become veterans?

If the fear is that it is too much for one person to handle I am certain Allan will appoint capable people to help relieve the load and leave him to carry on the administration in his usual capable manner. — C. W. Morris, 37-342 Old Island Highway.

Not entitled

If Mr. Clark made an election promise to transfer the Canadian embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem, it was wrong and he should immediately apologize and contradict it. The Jews are not "the Chosen People" and are not entitled to make Jerusalem their capital city. — E. W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful Street.

A dangerous gambit

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM

OTTAWA —Pierre Trudeau's final pre-election taunt has come to the fore again as the new prime minister wrestles with his campaign pledge to shift the Canadian embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

If he does so, he will end Canada's role as a neutral in the Middle East, put every Canadian diplomat around the world in danger and jeopardize millions in Canadian business contracts. Not a bad parley for someone who just 24 hours after taking power reacted so confidently to a simple press conference question.

In January on his world tour he arrived in Israel with his aides. He was joined there by two members of the Toronto Jewish community: Jeffrey Lyons, a lawyer who has known Clark since university days, and Irving Gerstine, president of People's Credit Jewellers and a topy Tory fund-raiser.

Also joining Clark at this moment was Ron Atkey, the Conservative candidate in the Toronto riding of St. Paul's — one of the handful of ridings in the country where the Jewish vote is crucial.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin put the request to Clark — as he does to all such visiting politicians — that the symbolic shift of the embassy be made from Tel Aviv on the coast the few miles inland to Jerusalem.

The same pressure has been put on all the other western nations that recognize Israel. Every one of them, from the U.S. on down, have refused.

The reason is simple. The future of Jerusalem is still a volatile issue, with the Israelis occupying the eastern half of the city they captured from the Jordanians in the 1967 war. For Canada — or any country — to move its embassy there would signify official recognition of the city as the property of Israel.

Terrorism

Jerusalem is regarded as a holy city by Jews, Christians and the 800 million Moslems around the world. The move by the Clark government would enrage Arab passions and threaten even more terrorism in a city where a Mercedes filled with dynamite was found near Clark's hotel at the time of his visit.

The fact is that the only countries with embassies in Jerusalem — Holland and a group of Latin nations — situated there in the 1950s when the city was divided and East Jerusalem belonged to Jordan. Since the 1967 war not a single country has attempted the move that Clark is now contemplating.

The difference is that in January Clark was approaching an election campaign and had his eye on those three "Jewish" seats in Toronto. The word among his aides was that he was pondering making his embassy pledge on that January visit.

Instead, he made it in April during the campaign. It's why this reporter asked him the question at last Tuesday's press conference about the timetable for the move — an attempt to get him on the record as to his intentions now that he was officially prime minister.

Targets

External affairs people here were appalled at his bravado. They point out that every Canadian family in an embassy practically anywhere in the world would be targets of Arab terrorists.

Bell Canada, with a $1 billion contract to establish a telecommunications maze in Saudi Arabia, is as enraged as the Arabs.

Canada has peace-keeping troops patrolling the Golan Heights (where Clark got into that trouble with a bayonet) and that role would obviously be wiped out if Ottawa seemingly took sides in the Middle East dispute by moving to Jerusalem.

Finally, it's known Flora MacDonald privately opposed the idea before Monday — when she became the external affairs minister assigned to carry out the move.

And all that strategy to capture those three Toronto seats? In fact, the Tories won only one of them — Atkey's riding. Bob Kaplan kept York Centre for the Liberals and Tory MP Rob Parker lost Eglinton.

It could prove to be a very dangerous campaign gambit when so little was at stake.

Question: What should you do when the warning sounds?

Answer: Take a sheet. Wrap yourself in it. Proceed to the nearest cemetery.

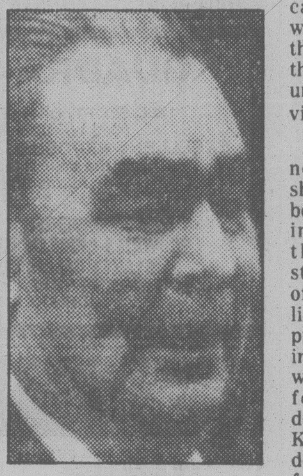
Russians who tell it would be surprised to know that there are Western strategists who think the Soviet civil defence program so effective that Soviet losses in a nuclear exchange with America might be "only" a few million, and a war for Moscow not so unthinkable.

That Americans should be raising this and other doubts about the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II) that Presidents Brezhnev and Carter will sign in Vienna on June 18 both irritates and disconcerts the Russians.

What emerges strikingly from conversations in Moscow with both well-placed (and at their wish anonymous) Russians and senior Western diplomats is agreement that the greatest value of SALT has been to force the super-powers to discuss delicate problems of national security with a frankness unprecedented in history.

"We are now talking about things," one Westerner said, "that would have been unthinkable when the SALT talks began, and it gives hope that we'll be able to discuss other problems one day in an equally rational manner. The Russians now know that we don't mean to do them in and I don't think they mean to do us in."

It has not been easy for the Russians, whose traditions and political beliefs both make for deep suspicion of the West. Last year, when for the first time they produced details of their strategic arsenal (the SALT talks had previously by mutual agreement worked from the estimates of U.S. intelligence), the chief Soviet negotiator commented that the revelation marked the end of a tradition several hundred years old, and that "this is perhaps not a bad thing."



BREZHNEV
. . . 'marked for life'

For all their readiness to exchange with the Americans what a dozen years ago, would have been considered the deepest military secrets, there is much that remains unchanged in the Russian view of the world.

The pride, self-righteousness and suspicion that shape this view have roots both in Russian history and in Marxist-Leninism but they are incalculably strengthened by the memory of the last war, when 20 million Soviet citizens died. The present Soviet leaders were in their mid-30s when the war began and few foreigners who have had dealings with Brezhnev or Khrushchev before him doubt that it marked them for life.

There is a strong sense of aggrievement that the West does not understand what Russia experienced then.

Their forces and strategy in Europe are designed to ensure that, if there is a war, it will be fought as far away as possible from Soviet territory. Russians find it difficult to understand the anxiety this provokes in Western Europe. The same is true of the structure and development of Soviet missile forces, where the self-righteous pursuit of maximum security is seen in America as unsettling this strategic balance.

Russian pride fuses with Soviet ideology into the complaint that the hard-won equality with America in nuclear strength does not bring with it recognized equality in the other affairs of the world. A Russian I talked to was indignant about a recent interview Dr. Kissinger had given in Japan. Kissinger was worried about the appearance of a Soviet aircraft carrier in the Pacific and the possibility of a Soviet naval base in Vietnam. (The Russians insist they don't want one. Western diplomats add the Vietnamese probably don't want to give them one.)

"The Americans always look at things in their own way," the Russian said. "But how many aircraft carriers do they have in the Pacific and how many bases in Japan alone?" There is a fuss, I was told elsewhere, when the Soviet Union carries out a military airlift to Ethiopia, but the West has conducted similar operations for far longer.

Such inequality, one is told, cannot go on. And yet, in Soviet eyes, it does and nowhere more so than in the Middle East. There is great bitterness at the way the Soviet Union has been excluded from the search for a Middle East settlement, though some comfort is taken from the Americans' present difficulties: "The Americans have tied themselves in a knot and they must untie it themselves."

Behind the demand for equality lies the suspicion that the West could still use its superior economic strength (for the Russians know they are not entirely equal) to bleed the Soviet Union in an arms race. It is an old fear. "When the Americans dropped their atom bomb at Hiroshima it forced us into the nuclear race and put our economy back 20 years." An exaggeration, perhaps, but the feeling rings true. There is a suspicion, too, that the West will use China to a similar end.

The paradox in the Soviet view of the world is that, while Soviet leaders now discuss national security secrets with their potential adversaries, they still insist that there must be worldwide competition between "Communism" and "Capitalism." No one, they say, can stand apart from this struggle: thus the attempts to divide the non-aligned, or the countries of Africa, into the "progressive" and the "unprogressive."

The news from Moscow, then is mixed. There will be competition but it need not proceed to the point of confrontation. The Russians believe they have never promised anything more. Support for the world's national liberation movements, I was reminded, is written into the new Soviet Constitution.

But we are foolish if we forget that the Russians are no keener than we to take their sheets and proceed to the nearest cemetery. Developing that mutual interest is what co-existence is all about.

NEW YORK — Events of an energy-efficient holiday weekend:

Phil Rizzuto chatted with Frank Messer in a Cleveland Stadium, Phil Rizzuto was cold and miserable. He said he would spend an hour in the bathtub when he returned to his hotel.

Sun Yat-sen said he did not think much of Machiavelli's amoral attitude toward politics. Joseph Kraft said he did not think the indictment of Bert Lance would do much political damage to President Carter.

* * *

Handsome young men and women stood around filling stations chatting with men who operated gasoline pumps. Several of these men said there was a gasoline shortage. One of them said his customers were well-behaved.

Aristotle said he had been the teacher of Alexander the Great.

Phil Rizzuto said that, though the Yankees were four runs behind, there would be a lot more hitting before the game ended.

A man with magnificent teeth pointed to a map of North America and said there was a large storm over the Great Lakes. The cat wandered in looking hungry and I ate an apple.

Huge Sidey reported that he had travelled extensively in recent days and found very little support anywhere for President Carter.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning described her father as a stern man who forbade her to read books he considered unfit for young women. These did not include the Bible or Shakespeare.

Phil Rizzuto said it was raining holy cows in Cleveland. I walked 10 blocks and bought a canteloupe at $1.69, a loaf of bread, some lettuce and a copy of The New Yorker.

Tom Snyder asked Governor Brown why he did not talk freely about Linda Ronstadt. Governor Brown said it was because everybody needed some private space in life.

Steve Allen apologized to Aristotle for asking ill-informed questions after Aristotle had to interrupt him to point out that he was not a Greek of the golden age of Athens, but a Macedonian.

Machiavelli spoke in an Italian accent, but Aristotle spoke in a universal California accent instead of a Macedonian accent.

Buck Henry stood in front of a studio audience and illustrated whimsically that television audiences are more interested in carnal chitchat than in sociological guff.

A fragment of Skylab or something hurled from the high-rise apartment across the street hit the roof with a bang. After ascertaining that it had not crashed through and damaged the cat, I ate some shrimp, a green salad, some ourzo and a piece of blueberry pie.

* * *

Phil Rizzuto said the weather in Cleveland was the most unpleasant he had ever experienced.

A graybeard telephoned to ask if I recognized Sun Yat-sen as Keye Luke, famous among graybeards, as Charlie Chan's Number One son.

Ricardo Montalban stood under some palm trees in a white suit and received thanks from a nun for helping her to find the light. Tom Snyder told Governor Brown that he, Tom, would soon be on the East Coast again. I drank two ounces of Scotch with ice cubes and water and asked the cat if she recognized Elizabeth Barrett Browning as Jane Meadows, wife to Steve Allen.

The cat wanted to sit around the table chatting about Richard Nixon's decision to sell his San Clemente house for an nice profit instead of presenting it as a gift to the nation, as he originally promised, but she knew that I'm very stern with cats who try to sit around the table and, so, kept her lip buttoned.

Phil Rizzuto said he was freezing cold, and I had two more ounces of Scotch, easy on the water and forget the ice cubes.

"If you want to sit around chatting," I told the cat, "call Martin Agronsky."

* * *

Joseph Kraft said he thought President Carter's future was at the mercy of great events yet to develop.

The cat wanted to see Luis Rukeyser sitting around chatting with wizards of finance, but I wanted to see handsome young men and women asking filling station operators if there was still a gasoline shortage or whether it had been called off so Phil Rizzuto could get back to his bathtub.

This put the cat into a sulk and she went down to pour two ounces of Scotch while Aristotle was putting the needle into Steve Allen, which made me laugh because this is a cat that can't take two swallows of beer without losing her capacity to tell Sun Yat-sen from Shana Alexander and Jack Kilpatrick sitting around chatting about welfare reform.

I snatched the bottle from her and had two more ounces myself, forget the water, forget the ice cubes. Afterwards, the two of us sat around chatting and I told the cat if she had her hair styled and her teeth capped she could probably get work pointing to storms over the Great Lakes.

LAST OF THE LONGIES at Ford Motor Co.'s Lincoln-Mercury division plant in Wixom, Mich. — a 1979 Lincoln Continental two-door Town Coupe — works its way along the assembly line. The unit, No. 99Y5763622, is the last one of its kind to be built and the last really big car to be made in the U.S. White with a light-brown vinyl top, it's 19 feet, five inches long, lists for $11,476, and weighs more than 4,800 pounds ready to drive away. Only the Cadillac limousine, not a car for personal use, is bigger. Plant workers now are on a six-week layoff at 95 per cent of their base pay while Ford retools for 1980's smaller models. The new Lincolns are likely to be two feet shorter and more than 500 pounds lighter.

Black, the articulate historian, author and 34-year-old chairman of Argus Corp., heralded the survival of capitalism and individualism in Western society in a recent convocation address at Hamilton, Ont.'s McMaster University:

"My impression is that the accumulated historical forces of the right and the left arrived at an impasse in our society about 10 or 12 years ago."

Black recalled the changing face of capitalism in the 1950s, with the rise in consumerism, consumption and expectations.

"It was not just, as so often stated, a revolution of rising expectations and, therefore, of prearranged disappointments, but of entitlements — of a whole population righteously believing it could effortlessly receive what elemental arithmetic assured could not be sufficiently supplied."

While Karl Marx, whom Black described as an outstanding sociologist, was wrong about many things, "he did predict the crisis of continued growth that capitalism now faces."

As it developed, capitalism produced "compulsive and garish" consumerism, material expectations, economic inequalities and political agitation, he said.

People were disillusioned about the economic system, the left grew in popularity.

But that has changed with the emergence of "a renascent intellectual right," he said. And that intellectual trend has been followed by moderate right steps in recent British and Canadian elections.

Closer to home, Black sees the new philosophy producing "the re-emphasis of the importance of the proprieter in Canadian big business."

Plastics industry gears up for autos

TORONTO (CP) — As automobile manufacturers seek to lighten their products, the Canadian plastics industry is hoping to help take some metal out of cars, industry spokesmen say.

Stronger glass-fibre reinforced plastics have opened up new opportunities in the automotive industry.

By 1985, the use of reinforced plastics in cars is expected to be between 135 and 225 kilograms a car, compared with the current average of 85 kilograms and about 23 kilograms in 1967.

For each kilogram of plastic used the weight saving is 2½ kilograms of steel, an important saving when manufacturers strive for better fuel economy.

The Society of the Plastics Industry of Canada has formed a Plastics in Automotive Council to twig members to potential market.

"The council has a simple objective and that is to increase the Canadian content of plastic parts in the North American automobile," said council chairman Leonard Bolger, also vice-president of chemicals for Shell Canada Ltd.

New applications for plastic include exterior panels, engine hoods and plastic cabs on trucks.

"The car market is now wide open to plastics," said Kenneth Hord of Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd.

But large-scale exploitation will be difficult, requiring new technology and big capital spending, he said.

U.S. favors scale of pipeline profit

By CATHY McKERCHER

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. energy regulators have approved a sliding scale of returns for investment in major portions of the Alaskan natural gas pipeline.

The U.S. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission also approved a tariff schedule that allows the pipeline companies to pass on full transportation costs to their users.

The commission said the decisions would provide a fair return to equity investors in the $14 billion project and would protect their investment.

Sponsors of the project, which will bring Alaskan natural gas through Canada to the U.S. starting in late 1984, have 30 days to file a petition for a review of the order. It is due to become final in 60 days.

A spokesman for Northwest Alaskan Pipeline Co., a major U.S. partner in the project, said the company wants to study the order closely before commenting.

But it appears unlikely that sponsors will be happy with the rate, and commission chairman Charles Curtis has said he may consider a different rate of return schedule.

The approved schedule confirms an earlier rate proposal which Northwest Alaskan rejected as punitive.

The rate of return system that will apply is an almost revolutionary concept in which rates increase if costs are held down and decrease if cost over-runs soar.

The commission order would use a centre rate of return of 17.5 per cent for the Alaskan portions of the pipeline if cost over-runs are 30 per cent. The centre rate for the so-called northern border portion, from the Canadian border to Dwight, Ill., would be 15 per cent.

Chairman Curtis, while concurring with other commissioners on the rate of return mechanism, said he preferred an 18 per cent centre rate for Alaskan portions of the line, but only if sponsors are willing to accept a more severe penalty for major cost over-runs.

He said he preferred a so-called marginal rate of six per cent rather than the eight per cent approved by the commission, which he said may provide too little incentive to keep costs down.

The rate of return for investment in portions through Canada is to be set by the National Energy Board of Canada. Still to come is a decision on returns on investment in the western leg of the pipeline.

Equity investment is expected to account for 25 per cent of pipeline financing. The rest is to be raised through borrowing.

The commission said a critical part of its order on equity financing was approval of the tariffs proposed by the sponsors. By allowing a cost-of-service tariff rather than one set at a fixed rate, the commission felt that risk borne by project sponsors in construction and operation of the system would decline.

"This assures that revenues available to the project companies are adequate to meet their expenses, regardless of fluctuations in costs of volumes transported," the agency said in a statement. "They will not, however, become effective until the system is completed and commissioned."

The commission order leaves unresolved some other tariff questions, including the depreciation rate that is to be used in calculating the cost of service for Canadian gas to be transported through the southern portion of the route.

JET provides experience for youthful job-seekers

TORONTO (CP) — Tammy Henderson, 17, is one of 3,500 young people in Metropolitan Toronto who have found a way to lick what has come to be known as the Catch 22 dilemma.

The dilemma is trying to find a job when the prerequisite to getting it is job experience.

She signed up for the federal Job Experience Training (JET) program, designed to provide job experience for school dropouts or high school graduates who have no plans for university education.

In Ontario, JET has a $13-million budget of which 35 per cent goes to the Metro area. Under the program, business and industry are offered a $1.50-an-hour wage subsidy, up to $1,560, for each young person hired for a 26-week job.

JET got Tammy a job with Apotex Inc., a pharmaceutical manufacturer which also accepted two other youths from the federal program.

Her employer, Max Denome of Apotex, was pleased with the newcomers.

"They're young, intelligent and want to work," he said, adding that their jobs are permanent if they wish.

Andy Anderson, 18, had a part-time job with the Liquor Control Board of Ontario before he joined Apotex under JET.

A Grade 12 graduate, Anderson got discouraged looking for jobs.

"The wanted older and more experienced workers."

Another JET youth, Pam O'Sullivan, 20, has been working as a sales clerk at Zellers Ltd.

"I haven't been disappointed. I have learned a lot about retail that I could later apply elsewhere."

She said the choice of jobs through the JET program is "not dead-end."

Paul Reid, a store manager for Zeller's, said there are definite advantages to employers involved in JET, apart from having half the minimum wage paid.

He found that hiring through the federal Manpower offices was beneficial and saved time in screening job applicants.

The difference was that JET set some kind of educational limitations and its workers are eager to do a job well.

Reid's store employed four JET recruits.

"These kids want to work," he said.

"Maybe we got lucky and got the cream of the crop."

Tripling of TSE index predicted by broker

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Stock Exchange composite index will more than triple within five years, according to stockbroker Dominik Dlouhy.

He said the index of 300 stocks, currently at about 1500, will rise to 5000, although some weak periods should be expected along the way.

Dlouhy, president of Maison Placements Canada Inc. of Montreal, told the Association of Canadian Pension Management seminar the slumps in the market will be irrelevant for serious investors.

He said the last five or six years on the North American stock markets matched the severity of the 1929 crash.

But on the basis of the relationship between reviving stock prices and projected earnings of companies, "our market is very low."

He said only a major collapse in earnings could cause a dive in stock prices.

"Yet every businessman I talk to tells me that 1979 looks better than 1978, and that the outlook is for even higher earnings down the line."

Dlouhy believes this optimism is caused by changing government policies more favorable to the private sector and profits.

These policies will continue for a number of years, he said.

He also expects stiffer competition for Canadian securities from foreign investors because of Canada's energy resources.

Fireman acts fast

NANAIMO (CP) — An off-duty firefighter was quick to act Thursday when he saw a man running from his burning house with his clothes aflame.

The fireman, George White, chased the man down the street and smothered the flames in a blanket, fire department officials said.

Robert Steel, 42, of Nanaimo was reported in critical condition today in the burns unit of Victoria General Hospital with third-degree burns to 70 per cent of his body.

Kaiser hike

OAKLAND, Calif. (Reuter) — Kaiser Steel Corp. has announced it is raising prices by an average of 4.3 per cent on most of its flat-rolled products, effective Aug. 1.

Dylex keen to expand

TORONTO (CP) — Dylex Ltd., the huge clothing retailer, plans to enter the U.S. market with a major acquisition while continuing rapid expansion in Canada.

Chairman James Kay told the annual meeting the company is looking for a large American clothing company although a small retail chain is possible "if it has strong management."

Dylex, the Toronto-based holding company for Tip Top, Fairweather, Harry Rosen, Big Steel Man, Suzy Shier, Thrifty's, Town and Country and Braemar plans to add 60 to 70 stores this year to its 584 Canadian outlets.

"Contrary to some opinions, we do not believe that Canada has a surplus of retail space and are more confident than ever that we can achieve our expansion plans," said Kay.

The company plans to open 100 stores a year in 1980 and 1981.

Kay said after the meeting Dylex is looking at a limited number of companies as takeover candidates. He said would like to make a cash offer for a southern U.S. chain.

President Wilfred Posluns told the meeting poor first quarter results caused by unexpected resistance to higher clothing prices should be overcome by the end of the year.

Women's clothing increased 15 per cent in the first three months of 1979 and the company was stuck with high inventories.

TOTS' TRAIN proved popular at Glancolme Days celebrations over the weekend. Small fry sucked thumbs, waved balloons and made believe they were brakemen as mini-train trundled around tiny track. Fair-goers enjoyed great weather and while youngsters enjoyed rides candy floss and hot dogs, beer garden did a roaring business with adults seeking liquid refreshment.

Whole farm seized for minor road

SURREY (UPC) — John Wong has learned that the municipality will expropriate his entire 17.5-acre vegetable farm to make way for a mere 660 meters of highway.

The proposal to expropriate the land, owned and farmed by Wong and his family for 16 years, was approved May 28 by Surrey council but Wong only learned of it Sunday.

Surrey mayor Bill Vogel confirmed Wong had not been told of the expropriation or invited to the council for discussion. It was not policy, he said, to advise people the municipal authority planned to expropriate their property.

Vogel said the road was needed for access to an industrial area.

"We actually needed only 3.5 acres of Wong's farm for the road, but we approached him earlier this year with an offer to buy the farm," Vogel said. "He agreed to sell for $970,000, but we had the land assessed and the market value was estimated at $540,000.

Overgaard returned

VANCOUVER (CP) — Muriel Overgaard of Victoria was re-elected president of the British Columbia division of the Canadian Union of Public Employees on Sunday.

At the division's annual meeting, delegates passed resolutions calling upon the federal and provincial governments to encourage development of secondary industries to process resources in Canada instead of exporting them.

They also called for a "more equitable distribution" of income tax through increased corporation taxes and removal of all sales tax and decreased personal income tax.

Colleges fear new act

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The autonomy of local college boards is being eroded by the Colleges and Provincial Institutes Act, the newly-elected president of the B.C. Association of Colleges said Sunday.

Ian Edgar, speaking at the group's 12th annual meeting, said the act has provisions for three separate ministry-appointed councils that could prevent local college boards from having access to the minister of education.

The three councils he referred to are the Management Advisory Council, the Occupational Council and the Academic Council. Members of the councils are appointed by the education ministry.

Frank Beinder, executive-director of the association, said the group does not want another body between the college board and the minister.

"We want direct access," he said.

In the association's elections, Edgar, a member of the board at Capilano College in North Vancouver for the last five years, defeated Beryl Bennett, board chairman at Nanaimo's Malaspina College.

B.C. N-sub protesters arrested

BANGOR, Wash. (AP) — Ten Canadian anti-nuclear protesters were charged with trespassing Sunday and booked into Bremerton City Jail after scaling the fence at the Trident nuclear submarine base here.

The 10 had entered the base Saturday in an attempt to get themselves arrested to publicize their opposition to the Trident base. Three other persons, also Canadians, who entered the base Sunday were issued warning letters and released.

The policy at the base, which has encountered frequent protests since last year, has been to give the demonstrators one warning and to lay charges the second time.

Most of the protesters were from the Vancouver area and belong to the Pacific Life Community, an anti-nuclear group.

The 13 "very peaceful" protesters chanted slogans, threw rugs across the top of the five-foot chain-link fence and climbed onto the base about mid-afternoon, a navy spokesman said.

They were met by security police who handcuffed them and bused them to a building on the base for processing, she said.

Three were found to be "first-timers" who were issued barring letters. The letters threaten a $500 fine, six months in jail or both if they are found on the base again.

All 13 of the persons arrested Saturday were released with letters.

The three persons released with warning letters Sunday were identified as Ira Zvarski of Abbotsford and Michael McDonald and Micha Gampel of Vancouver.

Bremerton City Jail officials identified the 10 persons held on trespassing charges as Canadians: Douglas Wilton of Kaslo; John Wells of Hornby Island, David Unwin of Surrey; Clifford McFarlane, Thomas Sharpe, Shyamali Tan, Kenneth Waldron, Michael Welsh and Scott Lattimer, all of Vancouver; and Ralph Green of Barrie, Ont.

First grads by Nishgas

NEW AIYANSH (CP) — It was a day full of proud firsts for the Nishga Indians Saturday as the first graduating class received diplomas at the first high school in British Columbia's first native Indian school district.

B.C. Supreme Court Justice Thomas Berger, who awarded the diplomas, told the 33 graduates, 29 of whom were Nishga, that they should work hard at retaining their Nishga identity.

"Hold to your values," he said. "When you are strong and know who you are, you make Canada strong."

Before he was named to the Supreme Court, Berger took the Nishga claim to 5,000 square miles of the Nass River Valley all the way to the Supreme Court of Canada in 1973.

The Nishga lost on a technicality, but the strength of their case caused the federal government to change its position and begin negotiating land claims with various native groups. The Nishga claim has not yet been settled.

A new school district was formed in 1976 to cover only four Nishga communities in the Nass Valley, and the new combined elementary and high school was built in this community about 80 kilometres upriver from the mouth of the river in northwestern B.C.

Previously, Nishga children left the valley if they chose to continue their education.

After a church service at which the graduates were blessed by Father Hubert McMillan, an Anglican minister speaking in the Nishga tongue, the graduates paraded to the school gymnasium for the ceremony.

They wore red-trim-on-black Nishga blankets over traditional graduation gowns and were led by Nishga drummers. About 600 people attended the gathering.

Berger said that in the past their has been an effort to erase the collective knowledge of various Indian peoples.

Whites only recognized how important the Nishga culture was to Nishga people, he said, because the Indians insisted upon it. He said it is important that Nishga students study European and Canadian history, but they must also pay attention to their own roots.

"Aboriginal rights include the right to know who you are," he said.

Swiss financiers see recession

BASEL (Reuter) — The Bank for International Settlements said today the current surge in inflation may lead to a major world recession and renewed currency unrest.

To head off this threat, it called for a further reduction in the United States balance-of-payments deficit and a radical oil-saving policy by Western industrialized countries.

The bank's annual report said current inflation gives little or no cause for optimism, in particular since it is spreading to countries where growth is still slack, and also to some of those strong-currency countries tht had hitherto kept prices stable.

The bank said the best scenario for the future is for the U.S. economy, growing rpidly in recent years, to move into a mild recession. This should include an improvement in its balance of payments, it said.

If the U.S. economy overheats, it might lead to restricted growth policies by economic powers such as West Germany and Japan in order to combat imported inflation.

There would then be a major world recession when the U.S. boom eventually collapsed, the report said.

The bank said Western industrial countries must in the future co-ordinate their policies, although it agreed chances of this are dim in the light of past experience.

In recent years, the United States has been seeking to reduce unemployment by expansionary policies, while hard-currency countries such as West Germany and Japan have given priority to taming inflation and followed a more-restrictive course.

The report said an economic recovery appears to have begun in Europe, but signs of this are less strong in Japan and Switzerland.

On oil conservation, the bank said even if results of policies are only long-term, the fact that measures are seen to be taken might have an immediate effect on oil prices.

Giguere trial adjourns

MONTREAL (CP) — Senator Louis Giguere's trial for breach of trust against the Liberal Party of Canada was adjourned for six weeks today only 90 minutes after it began.

One witness, former justice minister Marc Lalonde, appeared in sessions court to testify against Giguere, a former Liberal fund-raiser charged with taking $16,537 for his own use from $55,000 in cheques he received on behalf of the Liberal party in April, 1970.

Crown prosecutor Bernard Beaudry told Judge Jean Goulet the donations were from the Royal Bank of Canada, Distiller's Corp., The Bank of Montreal, Power Corp. of Canada Ltd., the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. and Steinberg Inc., Quebec's largest supermarket chain.

Murder charge laid to Astles

KAMPALA (AP) — Bob Astles, Idi Amin's former right-hand man, appeared in a Ugandan court on a murder charge today and told reporters: "I think I will get justice. I am not scared."

"I am glad to be back in Uganda," said Astles, 55, who was jeered by hundreds of Ugandans when he arrived handcuffed for a preliminary court appearance, booed in the crowded courtroom and jeered again as he was taken back to Luzira prison.

Chief Magistrate James Okugu read the murder charge to Astles and told the defendant he could apply to the High Court for bail. Okugu then scheduled another court session for Astles on June 25.

Astles, extradited from Kenya on Saturday, did not plead to the charge. No additional charges were lodged against him, but officials have said they are investigating Astles in connection with seven other murders.

Astles was believed involved in purges of Amin's opponents, as well as in some of the former dictator's publicity stunts. His frequent contacts with foreign reporters during Amin's eight-year rule made him the Ugandan figure most widely known outside the country after Amin himself.

Iraq triggers new concern on oil prices

NICOSIA (UPI) — Iraq is breaking the OPEC price front by boosting its crude oil prices to the level of Libya, a move that could send Persian Gulf oil prices to around $20 a barrel, an authoritative Middle East weekly said today.

The Middle East Economic Survey (MEES) said Iraq has notified its crude oil customers that a "most-favored seller" clause is to be included in contracts effective June 1.

This, MEES reported, will mean Iraq will get "the highest premium charged by any other OPEC producer" over and above base prices for crude oil supplied under Iraq's contracts.

OPEC prices for crude oil are more than $14 a barrel, depending on the quality and sulfur content of the oil.

Libya presently has the highest surcharge on crude among OPEC members — $5.31 a barrel above the originally scheduled four-quarter 1979 prices on some of its crudes. MEES said it has found that it is the Libyan surcharge level that the Iraqis have in mind.

The Iraqis have ignored arguments that the Libyan and other African crude price increases are officially described as additional quality premiums rather than straight surcharges.

In the Iraqi view, MEES said, any increase in the prices of African crude oil is caused by the general scarcity of crude oil rather than to any difference in quality.

And this scarcity premium, they say, should apply just as much to Iraq and other Gulf crudes as to African crudes.

MEES said some companies have apparently been trying to persuade the Iraqis to lower their sights and content themselves with a surcharge equalization within the Persian Gulf context.

That would mean catching up with Iran, whose surcharge, at $3.80, is currently only $1.26 above Iraq's. But there seems to be little chance of the Iraqis changing their minds at this stage, MEES said.

Poorer, developing countries will be exempt from, or at least compensated for the new surcharges, MEES said.

Some reports suggest that some government-to-government deals with southern European and South American countries — such as Spain, Portugal, Greece and Brazil — may also be exempt, but could not be confirmed.

MEES said the significance of the Iraqi price increase was that other Persian Gulf countries would be tempted to follow Baghdad's lead.

Alice Cassidy top student

Esquimalt secondary school has selected Alice Cassidy as this year's outstanding student.

The 17-year-old student was chosen because she has combined high marks in all subjects with exceptional leadership qualities.

She single-handedly raised $750 in advertising money for the school annual and organized a dance-a-thon to raise money for graduation.

City man bitter over GM's lemon

Elmer McEwen wants satisfaction from General Motors.

The Victoria man says he has a two-year-old Chevrolet Caprice that has spend more time in the garage than on the road because it contains the wrong transmission.

He says GM won't accept any responsibility even though his car contains an inferior automatic transmission.

McEwen's troubles started when the bolts sheared off the transmission three months after he bought the car.

Since then other problems including cracked suspension springs, a broken heating coil and a horn that doesn't work properly have kept mechanics busy on his vehicle about 500 hours.

McEwen says he was told by mechanics working for a local GM dealer the car contains a lighter-than-normal transmission designed as an experiment to reduce its weight.

Complaints to General Motors of Canada district service manager Paul Moore have not been successful.

McEwen also talked with consumer and corporate affairs ministry officials who told him Cornell Motors, the dealership that sold him the car, might give some money back.

Playoff fever bled city blood banks

What's hockey got to do with blood donor clinics?

A great deal, says the Victoria City and district branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

The society blames the lure of the Stanley Cup finals as one of the major reasons Victoria clinics fell 20 per cent short of their goal for May, missing the mark by 180 donors.

The society says hospitals in the city need an average of 37 pints a day to satisfy the demand.

In an effort to avoid dangerously low blood supplies as existed most of last summer, a renewed appeal has gone out to donors to attend clinics scheduled throughout next week as follows:

— Monday, Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, from 2:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.

— Tuesday, Victoria Press, 2621 Douglas, from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m.

— Wednesday, Mayfair Mall, 3147 Douglas, from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m.

— Thursday and Friday, Parliament Buildings, Newcombe Auditorium, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

BCGEU set for battle

VANCOUVER (CP) — Public sector employees must regard upcoming contract negotiations with the provincial government as a make or break situation, John Fryer, general secretary of the British Columbia Government Employees Union, told the union's annual convention here Saturday.

Fryer said government negotiators will present rigid wage and fringe benefit guidelines.

The two-year contract for 37,000 BCGEU members expires July 31, 1979 and negotiations for a new contract are scheduled to begin Tuesday.

Fryer said the union will seek a two-year agreement including wage increases and a cost-of-living clause. The union wants tightening up of the contracting-out clause, increased vacation for long service employees, paid maternity leave, weekend premiums and establishment of a legal services plan.

Also being sought are increased protection for employees transferred to Crown corporations, occupational health and safety protection and establishment of an alcohol and drug abuse counselling program.

Fryer said indications are the government will attempt to introduce negative bargaining in negotiations, such as agreeing to wage increases of various sizes for some, but not all, workers.

"Divide and conquer has long been a standard management bargaining policy," he said.

He said the best example of the government's negative attitude towards negotiations can be found in remarks made by Premier Bill Bennett to a federal-provincial conference in 1978. Bennett said then that wage increases for public sector employees should follow rather lead those given to private sector employees.

Attempts also will be made to take away or weaken the workers' dental plan and take away workers' rights to refuse overtime and not to cross picket lines, Fryer said.

He said because of the negative position already taken by the government, it will probably be necessary to hold a strike vote and strike action may be necessary.

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

A cocktail mixture of regular leaded and premium unleaded gasoline is proving to be the answer for those older model cars which previously ran on the premium leaded variety.

Canadian refineries are gradually phasing out premium leaded gas and this has presented some problems to owners of pre-1970 automobiles.

Bob Dunsmuir, secretary of the Automobile Dealers Association of Victoria, said in an interview the city has more of these cars than any other part of Canada and his Shell station has been deluged by customers wanting to know what to do.

In the bigger cars, Dunsmuir says a formula can be arrived at for the proper mixture of regular leaded and premium unleaded gas.

For example, he owns a 1963 Cadillac with a 23-gallon tank and after some experimenting he found that $5 worth of regular and the remainder unleaded does the trick.

The so-called "dieseling" or "run-on" where the car runs after the ignition is turned off has stopped, Dunsmuir says, the mileage to the gallon has increased and the car is generally performing better.

The station he runs at the junction of Yates and Fort has a '69 Chevy half-ton which also runs perfectly on the same mixture as the Cadillac.

Dunsmuir says cars with smaller tanks, like Toyotas or Datsuns, don't have to use the formula mixture. They can perform very well by running on two tanks of regular to one tank of unleaded, whether premium or regular.

He says he and the station's other employees have not found one car in the last three months that has had to have the timing changed or any other adjustments made as a result of the gasoline switch.

Dunsmuir alleviates any worries that without lead in the gas — acting as a lubricant — the older cars' valve seats will wear more quickly.

He says most of the older cars, with at least 40,000 or 50,000 miles on them, have built up enough lead around the valves to form an artificial seat.

The interesting thing to watch as a result of the gasoline switch is what difference it will make to the life of the spark plugs, he says.

"We are optimistic that it will prolong the life of the plugs because the lead element has been decreased," Dunsmuir says, "and we are also optimistic the life of the exhaust system will be prolonged for the same reason."

He says he knows of a car running on unleaded gas which is still using the original set of plugs after 36,000 miles.

Dunsmuir says dealers were hit suddenly by the move to stop the production of premium leaded gas but they have known it was coming for about a year.

And it could have been forecast before that.

In the 1950s and '60s, the lead content of gasoline was increased in order to satisfy the high-performance, high-compression engines. At that time, adding lead components was the most energy-efficient way to boost octane.

(Octane is a measure of a gasoline's ability to burn smoothly in an engine without detonating. The higher the octane the better the combustion.

(In rough figures, the octane level of the new premium unleaded gasoline is up around 92 as compared with about 90 for the regular unleaded and 88 for the regular leaded.)

In the late '60s, governments established strict emission control standards for motor vehicles in order to lower the amount of polluting emissions.

Automobile manufacturers managed to comply with the standards by modifying the engines until the introduction of the catalytic converter — a device mounted on the exhaust system to further reduce harmful emissions.

Because the use of leaded gasolines renders a catlyst ineffective, unleaded gas was introduced.

Subsequently, the demand for premium leaded gas decreased until it has reached the stage now where refineries don't feel it is economically worthwhile to produce it.

Dunsmuir says he has yet to see a car that doesn't run better on the regular leaded-premium unleaded mixture.

He says the regular leaded gasoline will likely stay for a while but how long the combustion engine is going to stay is a different matter.

He says it is very inefficient and in this day and age when there is a shortage of gasoline in some places and the price is skyrocketing everywhere, alternatives are going to have to be examined.

He mentions the possibility of battery-driven cars or cars that run on something different like the hydrogen gas that some grains have been found to give off.

Saanich woods crispy dry

Two weeks of warm weather has Saanich bush crispy dry and fire prone.

Fire Chief Art Fryer said he is considering cutting off permits for open fires if there is no respite in a day or two.

"People should be cautioned," he said.

Firefighters were called to Prospect Lake Sunday afternoon to put out a quarter-acre brush fire, one of a rash of nuisance fires since May.

Insect war waged on winter moths

More than 7,000 predatory insects are quietly working throughout Greater Victoria in what entomologists hope will be a final solution to the winter moth problem.

The bugs were turned loose only this spring so it is too early to tell how effective they will be in controlling the widespread infestation of winter moths in ornamental and fruit trees.

Jack Ahrens, entomologist with the B.C. department of agriculture plant pathology branch, said 50 pairs of the agrypon wasp were released at each of 32 stations, and 150 pairs of cyzenis flies were freed at 14 sites between April 13 and May 18.

Hopefully, the 3,200 wasps and 4,200 flies have been busy laying eggs in the pupae of the winter moth, eggs that will hatch and feed on their host, then reproduce themselves in the next season to repeat the cycle.

Ahrens said there is no risk of the predators becoming a pest.

When the winter moth population begins to decline, the predator population will also decline because the moth is the only lifeline of the agrypon and cyzenis. They are indigenous to Europe and have been used successfuly as moth controls in the Maritimes.

To enhance and accelerate the control program it is planned to release more wasps and flies next year.

Moth pupae must be collected this season to determine how many have parasites, giving the entomologists an idea of the program's effectiveness.

The winter moth control committee, of which Ahrens is secretary, was set up between the federal and provincial agriculture departments, Environment Canada and University of Victoria.

Meanwhile, said Ahrens, the infestation of Bruce span worm which troubled Victoria trees for a number of seasons has declined naturally, as has the tent caterpillar.

Environment Canada and the federal agriculture department are combatting gypsy moths in Vancouver's Kitsilano district in an effort to crush an accidental outbreak and prevent it spreading. Physiologist Dr. George Puritch said the infestation has not reached Victoria.

"But if it gets established in Vancouver it is only a matter of time before it gets over here," Puritch said.

The gypsy moth, of European origin, is thought to have been hatched in Vancouver from eggs laid on a canoe brought from the eastern seaboard, where the moth became established about the turn of the century.

Puritch said there has been some misunderstanding about the gypsy moth, which the agriculture department wanted to spray with the insecticide carbaryl. Environment-conscious people objected and Greenpeace proposed less dangerous insecticidal soaps as an alternative spray.

But Puritch said there are differences in the way the two substances act and there has not been full research on the soaps which are still undergoing field tests in Quebec.

The soaps are not appropriate for some stages of the gypsy moth because they are poisonous only on contact. They must be sprayed directly onto the larva, whereas the carbaryl spray is effective through other stages.

Researchers need to know more about the soap sprays, making them somewhat premature for this purpose, Puritch said.

But they have two things going for them: They are pure and they have beneficial effects on the environment.

End feud over land: trustee

A Greater Victoria school trustee is recommending the school board end a 10-year-old land feud with Saanich council by releasing property the municipality wants.

Trustee Mary Breer will ask the board tonight to turn over a vacant lot on the corner of Boleskine and Burns Roads.

Saanich needs the property to complete redevelopment plans, according to Mayor Mel Couvelier, who said requests for the property started about 10 years ago but were repeatedly turned down.

When the board refused a request this year, Couvelier said he would ask Education Minister Pat McGeer to step in.

Breer says in a notice of motion the board should declare the property no longer required for education use.

The land was deeded to the Crown in 1908 and conveyed to the school district, but has never been used for education purposes.

At one point trustees were considering keeping the valuable piece of real estate as an investment.

The land reverts to Saanich when the board officially notifies the government it has no use for it.

Youth badly burned

A Victoria youth is in critical condition with burns to most of his body after jumping from a second-storey window to escape a fire at his home Sunday afternoon.

Peter Henn, 17, of 2648 Asquith is being treated at Victoria General Hospital for burns to about 90 per cent of his body surface.

Henn awoke in his second-floor bedroom to find it ablaze shortly before 6 p.m. and leaped from the window.

He was found by firemen and was given first-aid for burns and face injuries received in jumping.

Heppell said the blaze, which was brought under control quickly, caused about $12,000 damage.

A smoke alarm on the lower floor awoke an unidentified friend of Henn but by then the fire apparently had gained a foothold and cut off the second floor.

The youth's parents, Ernest and Mary Henn, were out of town at the time of the fire.

No real progress by growth thinkers

A lot of arguing but virtually no real progress today marked a Saanich think-tank committee's first attempt to tackle the problem of planning for population growth.

After a 90-minute meeting the policy and management committee had agreed on only one thing — that the municipality's urban containment boundary should be regarded as sacrosanct.

And even that is nothing new, because a similar policy statement is contained in Saanich's draft community plan.

Mayor Mel Couvelier had assigned the population numbers game to the committee composed of three aldermen and senior officials. He stressed that realistic forecasts of population growth for the next 20 years are fundamental to all aspects of long-term planning.

But Ald. John Mika claimed it is a largely useless and premature exercise, at a time when the municipality is still preparing a series of local area plans for the various Saanich neighborhoods.

A bunch of bureaucrats and aldermen could sit down and plan anything from a Peace River district to a New York, he said.

"I don't think we should be sitting here sticking pins on a map, saying this would be ideal or that would ideal. That's the way it was done in Kitimat.

"You remember Kitimat. It was supposed to be the best-planned community in North America but it's also one of the least livable.

"Even the planners admit that the one ingredient they didn't have was knowing what the population wanted."

Mika said Saanich residents can make their opinions and long-term aspirations known as part of the local area planning process.

But Ald. David Paterson pointed out that it has already taken Saanich four years to come up with a community plan, and if the local area plans that complement it take as long there will be no answers to certain key questions until at least 1985.

Ald. Howard Sturrock said he has no difficulty in supporting a firm policy that the urban containment boundary be kept inviolate, despite planning projections that there is only a 10-year supply of single-family residential lots remaining within the boundary.

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson, who pleaded for retention of the line, said Saanich should absorb its own share of regional population growth by redeveloping to higher densities such older residential areas as the Panhandle and the Gorge.

On the beach, a bundle of feathers

WE WERE STROLLING the home beach a couple of evenings ago when a white fleck among the duns and monochromes of the seadrift caught my eye. I plodded through windrows of gale-heaped pebbles to investigate.

A seagull, or what time and tide had left of a gull, lay between logs. One of the big glaucus-wings, masters of air and water, reduced by death to an untidy bundle of feathers.

Then I saw a subdued glint of metal, and with a sudden heaviness in my heart, kneeled to investigate.

"This one's banded," I said.

Win said on a note of protest, "Oh, no!"

But the band was there, a sturdy sleeve of salt-pitted aluminum alloy clinched around one leg just above the foot. And of all the glaucus-wings that come and go along our stretch of beach, only one to our knowledge wore a band.

"Look," I said, unconvincingly trying to offer reassurance. "It dosn't have to be Dum-Dum."

Win didn't answer. She turned to look out across the darkening Straits.

With my jack-knife I expanded the worn band and slipped it off the gull's leg. Stamped into its metal was this message:

Then the band number: 867-83849.

My wife was right, of course. The dead bird that wore the band didn't necessarily have to be Dum-Dum. After all, other gull chicks of his generation had been banded by wildlife biologists on Mitlenatch Island bird sanctuary in mid-Strait.

Still, the heaviness persisted . . . the feeling that we have lost a friend.

When Dum-Dum blundered into our lives, seven years ago, we didn't have too many friends in the Campbell River country. We had come north in June from Victoria to make our home here. Now summer had passed and fall was upon us, with winter coming on.

We had taken that summer off, squandered it on all the wonderful, inconsequential pursuits we'd been yearning to undertake for years. We fished a lot. We prowled the beaches. We went berrying and spent much time just loafing in the sun.

Now we faced the reckoning. Life was real, life was ernest, and if we wished to eat, I had better start jacking saleable words out of my too-long-idle typewriter. It was a dismaying prospect.

Then came Dum-Dum, a young gull who was obviously under a bush when the brains were passed out.

It was hard to remain downhearted for long with a feathered clown like Dum-Dum to provide endless diversions. Each landing achieved on our clothes-line pole was a triumph scored over daunting odds.

We waited for him to straighten out . . . to fly right . . . finally to take hold and start showing some sense. But Dum-Dum seemed to be set in the mould of a gauche and clumsy immaturity. He still skidded when he landed. His misadventures in trying to crack clams scooped up off the low-tide beach were always good for a laugh. Among his own kind, perhaps because of the band that marked him out from the rest, he was a pariah, a feathered outcast.

In fair weather, we rarely saw much of Dum-Dum. He was our foul-weather friend, lumbering in on the wings of a gale to be flipped squawking into a rose-bush by a thrust of the southeaster under his scraggly tail-feathers.

Somehow, though, he survived his misadventures and came to adult gull's estate.

He acquired the clean white and the slate grey of the fully mature glaucus-wing; also the yellow beak with distinctive red spot on either side of its tip. A handsome bird, sort of, though always and stubbornly accident-prone.

We watch with an anxious eye whenever a gull wheels in to land on our clothes-line pole these days, hoping against hope that the visitor will be Dum-Dum. But none of these winged folk are banded, and we sadly fear that we will not see his like again.

Or will we?

A youngish gull has started coming around. He looks at us with precisely the same short-sighted corkscrewing of his neck that Dum-Dum used. This antic character has developed the habit of rapping sharply on our kitchen window with his beak for attention.

He was peering in through the window at us this morning, and we were looking out at him, when Win delivered herself of an observation.

"Maybe Dum-Dum's gone," she said, "but this has to be Son-Of!"

Son-Of?

Well, so be it.

Patch-up retreat

Greater Victoria school trustee Martin Levin is recommending the board hold a full-day retreat within the next month to reconcile philosphical differences.

The retreat would be used to examine the board's performance and find ways to improve morale, Levin says in a notice of motion for discussion at tonight's meeting.

The board needs an entire day to look at issues such as "recent criticisms of the committee system by some board members, frustration expressed by others, the problems of trust and the necessity for a co-operative spirit if board functioning is to be improved," he says in a brief.

Trustees should also look at a recent report by schools superintendent Allan Stables recommending changes in board operation.

Heritage look to rail depot

The proposed downtown station for the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway will probably have a heritage look in keeping with its Old Town environs.

Victoria Ald. Murray Glazier, who obtained city council support last November for locating the station at the foot of Pandora, said Saturday the latest design for the structure will closely resemble Vancouver Island stations of the early 1900s.

It will feature a cupola, shake roof and siding, while other authentic touches might include an old railroad clock, telegraph key and old-fashioned ticket counter.

The plans and operating details have been under review by VIA Rail, and Glazier said he had further discussions last week with VIA's vice-president, Harold Murray, and sales manager Fred Rowell.

The present E&N station in Victoria West is poorly sited for convenience and public access, Glazier noted, whereas the Pandora site is handy for tourists and residents alike.

Glazier said Western Community commuters would be able to enter the heart of the city and return in the late afternoon, after the train had completed its up-Island run.

Film Racquet labor of love

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When Burt Convy's agent told him of an offer to star in a movie about tennis, the actor replied, "I'll do it," with no questions asked. That's the measure of Convy's devotion to tennis.

He got his reward on the first day of filming — a match with the sensational Swede, Bjorn Borg.

"The ball went past me so fast I couldn't get my racquet up," he recalls.

The name of the movie is Racquet, and it started filming in August, 1977. At that time, sports movies were rare, and no one had tried one about tennis.

Feminist Party creation urged

By JUDY CREIGHTON
CP Family Editor

TORONTO — Whether to field candidates under a new political party — The Feminist Party of Canada — or to work within the structures of the major political parties was the big question Sunday.

But no answer was provided as more than 500 women and a dozen men gathered to listen to feminists discuss the formation of a party with a "feminist perspective."

Margaret Evans, an organizer of the meeting, said that although women make up more than 50 per cent of the Canadian population, they make up less than five per cent of federal MPs. Only 10 women were elected to Parliament in the May 22 federal election.

"The recent election only served to emphasize the problems women encounter working with the existing political parties," she said.

Laura Sabia, former chairman of the Ontario Status of Women Council, warned her audience to avoid the pitfalls made 12 years ago by members of the women's movement.

She said those women fell into such traps as having abortion taken out of the Criminal Code. But the move was incorrectly interpreted to mean abortion on demand.

"That turned a large segment of the female population away from your aims, as did ignoring of women who choose to stay home and raise a family."

Panelist Angela Miles said that now is the time for the formation of a feminist party "because the women's movement is facing a new stage of our struggle.

"It's a struggle now to change laws and to harness all the energy that is available as a result of a growing membership in the women's movement."

However, Marion Holden, a spokesman for the Ontario New Democratic Party, said there is no need for a new political party to serve the needs of women because her party does so already.

"Sooner or later, as a feminist party, you are going to have to fight on male territory and you'll be doing it from an isolated perspective," she said.

However, another panelist, Mary O'Brien, said she made the same speech as Holden did "in 1942 and nothing has changed."

Evans said a feminist party would concern itself with issues that effect the future including moral values, social relationships and the environment.

She said the party plans to hold a founding convention late this year or early in 1980.

McDonald probe of RCMP acts protecting Mounties: Report

TORONTO (UPC) — The greatest concern of the McDonald Royal Commission investigating illegal acts by the RCMP security service is protecting the reputation of the force, two university professors charge.

In a newly released book titled The RCMP vs. the People, the professors quote one of the three commissioners saying "The Security Service is expecting a lot from us. We won't let them down."

The 260-page treatise, prepared by York University sociology professor Edward Mann and University of Toronto sociology professor John Alan Lee, is based on 18 months of research and 60 to 70 interviews with past and present Mounties, members of local police forces, journalists and staff members of two commissions investigating the force.

Displaying a finely-tuned sense of outrage, the professors have pulled together the various revelations of RCMP wrongdoing including break-ins, theft, arson and mail opening, and sought to explain the causes in a sociological framework.

Mann and Lee show scant respect for the procedures of the McDonald Commission, set up by former prime minister Pierre Trudeau to look into a variety of accusations against the RCMP.

They argue that the force has little concern about its secrets being revealed because the commission relies on the RCMP itself to provide most of its investigative materials.

Seven RCMP investigators assigned to the commission "selected those documents from among the RCMP's vast files which they considered relevant to the commissions purposes," the professors charge.

"The commission's legal counsel had the power to go through the RCMP files, but they rarely did so. The rationale was that the Mounties' 'magnificent seven' knew better where to look for files relevant to the inquiry."

By contast, Mann and Lee show much more faith in the Jean Keable commission set up in Quebec to investigate many of the same RCMP excesses.

"Far from depending on the RCMP, the Keable staff were concerned to protect their documents from them," the book says. "After aggressively subpoenaing evidence from the RCMP and QPP (Quebec Police Force), the inquiry protected it with a guard dog."

Again and again the authors attack the argument that RCMP excesses are the result of "overzealousness" on the part of a few corporals. Rather, they say, the blame can be traced to the force's devotion to military discipline and lack of supervision from politicians.

"The problem is not a few bad apples in the barrel, but bad barrels," Lee said in an interview. "Even if you changed all the people at the top level of the force, it would change nothing as long as the Mounties are trained in unwavering obedience to orders."

The politicians responsible for the RCMP and high-ranking Mounties have observed a doctrine of "plausible deniability" or "the need not to know", the authors charge, passing on embarrassing documents with such comments as "I didn't have time to read it — you take care of it."

The girl of his dreams

ST. CLOTHILDE, Que. (CP) — Police were searching late Sunday for a "lonesome" kidnapper whose efforts came to naught when he fell asleep in front of the woman he had just abducted from a holiday trailor near this town, about 30 kilometres south of Montreal.

Police said an armed man burst into the trailor where Monique Gingras, 26, and her husband were camping early Sunday morning.

He forced the woman at gunpoint into his van, drove about three kilometres, parked and then began recounting the story of his hard-luck life, a Quebec provincial police officer said.

After drinking two beers, the man fell asleep over the wheel and Mrs. Gingras slipped away unharmed.

"Apparently he was just a very lonely man," the officer said.

Last-ditch bid for Asbestos

THETFORD MINES, Que. (CP) — Quebec has made a last-ditch offer to buy Asbestos Corp. Ltd., Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau said Sunday, and he expects an answer from its controlling company by the end of the month.

Parizeau said both the government and officials of General Dynamics Corp. find the proposals "interesting," but he refused to reveal details. The St. Louis, Mo., company holds 54.6 per cent interest in Asbestos Corp.

The minister said a bill giving Quebec the power to expropriate Asbestos Corp. will be passed by June 21 when the Quebec national assembly recesses for the summer.

The willingness of the government to expropriate has forced General Dynamics to consider a purchase agreement seriously, he said.

"It's like a poker game — for big stakes," Parizeau said, adding that he has two big cards in his hands.

The first is the big stick of expropriation and the second is the tax laws of the United States and Canada.

He explained that under present tax laws, General Dynamics would have to pay much more in taxes if it was expropriated than it would if it sold its interests.

"This has been a major consideration in the negotiations since the beginning," Parizeau said.

Parizeau was speaking at the closing session of a weekend conference on economic developments in the area attended by Asbestos Corp. officials.

FOLLOWING BALL INTO NET, Steve Forslund scores second of his two goals after getting past Vancouver Croatia goaltender Brad Higgs in Province Cup soccer final as Victoria West clubmate Bob Duncan (11) raises arms in jubilation. Wests defeated Croatia 5-0 to reach Canadian final in September.

Wests overpower Croatia to gain national tourney

Victoria West has given Victorians the chance to see some other top-notch soccer talent later this year.

Wests captured the British Columbia championship with a convincing 5-0 shutout over Vancouver Croatia before 693 fans Saturday at Royal Athletic Park and earned the right to stage the four-team Canadian tournament, Sept. 15-17.

It marks the second time in four years that Wests have reached the nationals. They captured the provincial title and carried on to take the national crown in Winnipeg in 1976.

The Croatian club, which captured B.C. honors in 1970, had its best scoring opportunity in the opening minute but rarely threatened for the remaining 89 minutes.

Bob Duncan outraced a defender to open scoring for Vic West at the five-minute mark after being set up by a through pass from Steve Moss.

Following the break, Wests took over completely with winger Steve Forslund scoring at 67 and 76 minutes and substitute Dan Henry capped the offensive effort with five minutes remaining.

"We certainly didn't expect to win by five goals as Croatia had looked so good last weekend in the semifinals at Empire Stadium," said Vic West coach Bob English following the match.

"They must have played their best game getting to the final."

A Croatia spokesman tended to agree:

"We didn't play as a team today and we wasted too much energy yelling at the referee. The officiating wasn't great but it didn't have any effect on the score."

English, in his first year as coach of the Wests, said most players would take a few weeks holiday and return to practice sometime in August.

"Some players will be turning out for the Vistas (Vancouver Island Soccer League Alls-Stars) in the summer league and we'll all get together for exhibition games a few weeks before the Canadian final."

Cournoyer, Larouche left for the draft grab

MONTREAL (CP) — Several familiar names to National Hockey League fans throughout the years were left off their club's protected lists and will be available during the expansion draft Wednesday.

At that time the four clubs from the defunct World Hockey Association that will bring the latest expansion by the NHL to 21 teams — Quebec Nordiques, Winnipeg Jets, Edmonton Oilers and Hartford Whalers — will have an opportunity to stock their clubs with those players left unprotected by their current NHL employers.

Exempt from the draft are first-year professionals. No NHL team can lose more than four players in the draft.

The Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens, with a vast pool of talent, failed to protect captain and longtime right winger Yvan Cournoyer, who underwent surgery to repair an injured back for the second time early last season. He is listed as a free agent.

Forward Pierre Larouche, the one-time 53-goal man with Pittsburgh Penguins, was another prominent member of the Canadiens not protected.

Four defencemen, Rod Langway, Rick Chartraw, Gilles Lupien and Bill Nyrop, also were available. While the first three saw action as Montreal won its fourth consecutive Stanley Cup, Nyrop left the club during training camp last fall. Speculation is that the Canadiens will make deals to retain at least the first three.

New York Rangers, Stanley Cup finalists, made goaltender Wayne Thomas available, along with defenceman Jocelyn Guevremont and forward Pierre Plante. The Rangers cross-town rivals, the Islanders, left veteran defencemen Gerry Hart and Pat Price off their list, along with forward Jude Drouin, now a free agent.

Chicago Black Hawks did not protect assistant general manager and former defensive great Bobby Orr and defenceman Keith Magnuson

Boston Bruins failed to list veteran defencemen Gary Doak and Al Sims, but protected goaltender Gilles Gilbert and and forward John Wensink — both free agents.

Philadelphia Flyers did not protect veteran goaltenders Bernie Parent and Wayne Stephenson, choosing instead to go with Rick St. Croix and Phil Myre, newly-acquired from St. Louis Blues. Parent announced his retirement last week following a crippling eye injury earlier this season.

Veteran forward Ron Ellis and free agent utility man Stan Weir, along with goaltenders Pierre Hamel and Gord McRae, were not protected by Toronto Maple Leafs. McRae is also a free agent.

Defenceman Larry Goodenough and Hilliard Graves were left available by Vancouver Canucks.

Harmon Leong found it "very embarassing."

Son Karl and daughter Julia, not quite as embarassed, were the big winners in the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association junior derby Sunday. And dad, as the derby chairman, had to present the prizes.

Karl was a worthy winner. He landed a 20-pound chinook salmon to win the day's major prize — a bicycle donated by the Times. Derek Chow was runner-up with a 15.12 catch while Barry Lohr took third place with a 14:06 salmon.

Julia weighed in a 1:12 salmon to win the Guppie Cup for youngsters under 12.

And to make it a good day (for all but embarassed dad), Rose Leong, Harmon's wife, brought in a 12:01 catch to win second prize in the women's Sweetheart Derby staged at the same time. Marie Sidaway, landing a 17:11 chinook, was the winner while Shirley Lockett (8:12) was third.

Pecci hero of fans, but Borg bags title

PARIS (AP) — Bjorn Borg got the trophy and the winner's cheque of $49,000 and held onto his title, but it was Victor Pecci who won the adoration of fans at the French Open tennis championship.

For 30 minutes in Sunday's nerve-fraying final, Borg, the Swedish superman, looked vulnerable and human. He led Pecci 2-0 in sets and 5-2 in the third, but then the 23-year-old defending champion's machine-like precision and clay court brilliance suddenly cracked.

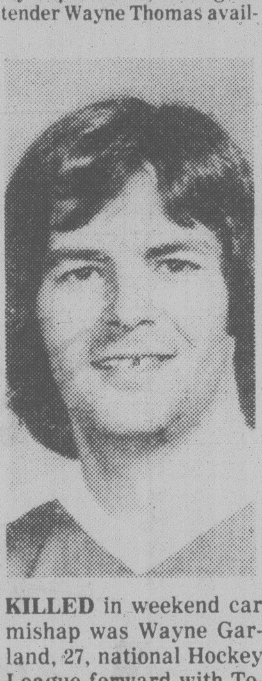
Through the crack burst Pecci with a flurry of brilliant volleys to win the next three games and eventually the set.

Borg regained his composure in the 10-minute break between the third and fourth sets and saved his fourth French Open crown with a 6-3, 6-1, 6-7, 6-4 victory. He departed the court immediately, trophy in hand, but the action wasn't over.

Excited fans ran on court and thrust Pecci onto their shoulders to parade him in front of the cheering crowd. For two weeks the little-known son of a Paraguayan doctor had wowed spectators by decimating players ranked much higher than he.

Chris Evert Lloyd of the United States won the $30,000 women's crown Saturday, gliding past Australia's Wendy Turnbull 6-2, 6-0.

In the French Open junior tournament, Ben Testerman of the U.S. took the title by downing Ramesh Krishman of India in the final on Sunday.



KILLED in weekend car mishap was Wayne Garland, 27, national Hockey League forward with Toronto Maple Leafs until traded to Los Angeles Kings last summer. Garland played most of last season with Springfield in American League.

Lion coach plans look at other quarterbacks

Times News Services

British Columbia Lions' first exhibition game of the season in Edmonton on Tuesday against the defending Grey Cup champion Eskimos may be remembered as the night that Carlos Brown, Dennis Shaw or Joe Poapoa made the Canadian Football League team.

Head coach Vic Rapp, who will take to Edmonton 45 of the 56 players on the Lions' roster, said Sunday at the club's training camp at Courtenay that he might give veteran starting quarterback Jerry Tagge the night off.

"We're thinking of giving the other guys the shot in Edmonton," Rapp said. "We've got too many quarterbacks and we have to find out what the other guys can do."

At Winnipeg Sunday, Calgary Stampeders showed impressive early form as they rolled over a porous Blue Bomber defence to score a 35-13 victory as the league's ehibition campaign got under way before 21,584 disappointed fans.

Willie Armstead led the Stampeder attack with two touchdowns catches and kicker Mike McTague accounted for 11 points on two field goals, four converts and a single. Other Calgary touchdowns were scored by Merv Walker and Richard Crump.

Whitecaps lose to Kicks; Chinaglia keeps scoring

Times News Services

Vancouver Whitecaps did most of the attacking Sunday, but Minnesota Kicks made Ron Futcher's goal early in the first half stand up for a 1-0 North American Soccer League victory.

Futcher punctured the Whitecaps' defence, the best in the league, for his sixth goal at 17:23. He zeroed in from close range, with assists from Alan Willey and Ace Ntsoelengoe.

Willie Morgan set up the play with a pass to Ntsoelengoe at the 20-yard stripe. Two Vancouver defenders collided, allowing Ntsoelengoe to feed Willey along the right side of the penalty box. Then Willey passed to Futcher, who was camped directly in front of the net for an easy tap-in.

Whitecaps, losing for the second time in 13 road games and slipping into second place in the National Conference West, outshot the Kicks 11-4 in the first half and had a 20-10 margin for the match.

Minnesota, 11-3, leads the Central Division of the National Conference.

Elsewhere, Giorgio Chinaglia again demonstrated that he is the constant factor upon which New York Cosmos can depend.

Franz Beckenbauer is injured and Chinaglia scores. Vladislav Bogicevic is injured and Chinaglia scores. Eddie Firmani was fired and Chinaglia still scores.

Sunday was no different for the 32-year-old striker, who connected for his 13th and 14th goals of the season to move into top spot in the scoring race as the Cosmos downed Dallas Tornado 4-1 in North American Soccer League action. Chinaglia now has 30 points.

With the absence of some of the Cosmos more reliable defensive players, interim technical director Julio Mazzei has asked Chinaglia to play more defence than usual.

"I should do what I'm good at doing when the other players come back," Chinaglia said. "Then I'll go back to the other position. Now I'm happy to help out on defence.

"I keep scoring goals even with our best players out, that's a good sign," he said.

Elsewhere Sunday, Rochester Lancers downed Philadelphia Fury 2-1 and San Diego Sockers blanked Edmonton Drillers 4-0.

On Saturday, Toronto Blizzard rebounded from a 2-0 deficit to beat San Jose Earthquake 3-2, Atlanta Chiefs whipped Chicago Sting 4-1, Tampa Bay Buccaneers shaded Washington Diplomats 1-0, New England Tea Men blanked Detroit Express 2-0, Portland Timbers downed Seattle Sounders 2-1, Houston Hurricane dumped Fort Lauderdale Strikers 3-1, Tulsa Roughnecks outlasted Memphis Rogues 4-3 and Los Angeles Aztecs tripped California Suns 3-2.

Runners pull ahead

RICHMOND — Richmond Roadrunners vaulted into first place in the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League with a hard-fought 15-13 victory Saturday over Esquimalt Legion, then added some padding Sunday by trouncing Burnaby Cablevision 13-6.

The weekend sweep boosted the Roadrunners margin to three points ahead of Burnaby and New Westminster, tied for second.

Greg Jensen paced the Richmond attack Saturday with three goals while Rob Grant, Mike Amos and Art Hazell picked up two each.

Russ Kennedy had four goals and four assists for Esquimalt. Tarey Pollock scored three and Jim Boyd two while Rav Pallan, Rob Reid, Bruce Alexander, and Ed Van Dyk completed Legion's total. Van Dyk also picked up four assists.

Esquimalt held a 6-5 lead after one period but trailed 9-8 after two.

Both clubs used two goalies. Esquimalt's Mike Duch was pulled in favor of Bill Thomas after being tagged for four goals in the first four minutes of play. The pair combined to make 36 saves. Richmond starter Reg Forster injured his finger in the second period and was replaced by Mark Ekengaren. They made a total of 29 stops.

In Burnaby, Doug Morrison potted four goals for Richmond while Bob Johnston had three and Jack Ballimore added two. John Swan was the only two-goal scorer for Burnaby.

Richmond outshot Cablevision 39-36.

City rowers qualify

Pat Walter and Bruce Ford of the Victoria City Rowing Club have been added to the growing list of district athletes who will represent Canada in the Pan-American Games at Puerto Rico next month.

The top-ranked pair combination in North America, the city oarsmen easily qualified for the national team by topping a Games' trial in Vancouver on Saturday.

They came back Sunday to add the British Columbia championship to their credentials with a victory in the provincial regatta held on Quamichan Lake near Duncan.

Walter completed a Sunday double by also winning the elite singles as Victoria City rowers dominated the regatta that attracted entries from Alberta and Washington as well as B.C.

Just kidding, says Forzani

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders wide receiver Tom Forzani says he was kidding a reporter when he said he wanted to be traded to Toronto Argonauts.

The three-time all-Canadian was quoted as saying he wished to be reunited with his Utah State University quarterback Tony Adams in Toronto.

"I like Calgary very much and want to stay here. I guess I've been around the league long enough to know I shouldn't be kidding a reporter. But I was and he took down everything I said as gospel."

Forzani made the comment in a radio interview after a workout Saturday.

Ailing hurler spreads pain

By The Associated Press

"I don't know what it was," the 40-year-old Atlanta pitcher said after shaking off a virus to hurl the Braves to a 10-3 National League baseball victory Sunday over the Phillies. "I just felt real terrible. Every time I tried to crank it up, it just flattened out."

Niekro used his off-speed pitches and knuckleballs to pitch his eighth complete game of the season and raise his record to 7-9.

In other National League games Sunday, Cincinnati Redss slipped by Montreal Expos 3-2, Houston Astros downed New York Mets 5-3, San Francisco Giants stopped Pittsburgh Pirates 7-4, Chicago Cubs clobbered Los Angeles Dodgers 10-3 and St. Louis Cardinalss nipped San Diego Padres 3-2.

"It's hard for guys to understand when I'm throwing a bunch of stuff like today," Niekro said. "When they were looking to hit something out of the ballpark, I just went to something off-speed to make them hit it on their own power."

The right-hander allowed eight hits in continuing his mastery over the Phillies, against whom he was 4-0 last year. Niekro now boasts a 21-12 lifetime record against Philadelphia.

In the American League, Baltimore Orioles nipped Texas Rangers 5-4, Chicago White Sox blasted Milwaukee Brewers 13-3, New York Yankees downed Kansas City Royals 10-4, Oakland A's walloped Toronto Blue Jays 12-1, Detroit Tigers took a 10-7 decision from California Angels, Boston Red Sox blanked Minnesota Twins 5-0 and Seattle Mariners beat Cleveland Indians 5-2.

Milt May and Chet Lemon hit two-run homers in leading a 21-hit Chicago attack against Milwaukee.

Willie Randolph and Lou Piniella drove in two runs each and Graig Nettles hit a home run as New York scored seven times in the seventh inning to beat Kansas City.

Dave Hamilton, making only his third start in four years, pitched a five-hitter and Derek Bryant drove in four runs as Oakland beat Toronto.

Odell Jones won his first game for Seattle after six losses, scattering seven hits in 8 2-3 innings.

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The softball crowd came out Saturday to honor Stan Kern and they wound up relishing performances by the retired pitcher's heirs.

On Stan Kern Night, youthful Dave Wilson and Mark Smith indicated Victoria Budgets' pitching future is in good hands. Wilson and Smith fashioned the first back-to-back no-hitters ever witnessed in senior men's softball ranks here as Budgets completed an embarassing sweep from Edmonton Crown Well Oilers.

Saturday's masterpieces at Royal Athletic Park, 9-0 and 8-0, sent the Edmonton squad, rated as one of Alberta's best, back home with stories to spread about the depth of Victoria's pitching.

Beaten 6-0 twice on Friday, the Oilers managed only four hits and failed to score a run in 28 innings. They coaxed only two walks, one each by Wilson and Smith to deprive them of perfection, and went down for a total of 43 strikeouts.

It was a mismatch, primarily because of Victoria's pitching strength.

Heading for Puerto Rico as Canada's softball representatives in the Pan-American Games in July, Budgets backed up their pitching with flawless fielding in all four games and had no trouble piling up runs.

Bob Walton took particular delight in leading Victoria's offensive assault. With his parents arriving from Ontario to watch him perform, Walton started the evening with a leadoff homer. He then went three-for-three in the second game, finishing off the evening with a two-run clout.

Otherwise, it was Kern's night. The fireballing righthander from Leduc, who arrived here in 1973 and helped elevate Victoria to international prominence in softball, was presented a variety of gifts by former teammates, fans and the Budget team.

However, the hightlight for Kern, wife Joan and their three children was the retirement of the No. 7 jersey that was Kern's while he toiled with Victoria.

Donna proves point with borrowed putter

MASON, Ohio (AP) — It was time for self-analysis of Donna Caponi Young's career after her first Ladies Professional Golfers Association championship.

"It's a big impact on me; I'm not over the hill; I can still win a major championship," said the woman who has done it three times, tacking on the LPGA crown to 1969 and 1970 U.S. Opens.

The latest major came after a final round, two-under-par 70 gave her a 72-hole total of 279, nine-under-par over the Nicklaus Golf Centre course. That was three shots better than runner-up Jerilyn Britz, 73-282.

"I'm 34 and I feel like I really haven't reached my potential yet," said the winner of 14 tournaments in 15 years. "Not being an outstanding putter, that might stand in my way."

Ironically, it was a borrowed putter from two-time PGA champion Dave Stockton that brought Young the $22,500 first place cheque.

"He lent it to me two years ago," said Young. "He used it, but I don't know if he won with it. I'm going to keep it until he wants it back.

She sank a 40-foot, par-saving stroke at the third hole, then two-putted from 100 feet two holes later, the last one from 10 feet. There also was another two-putter from 70 feet at the 12th. In all, she took only 31 strokes on the slick greens.

With her first triumph of 1979, Young ran her seasonal earnings to $72,025, fifth on the LPGA list. Her career money went to $549,340, No.6 on that list.

Canadian Sandra Post finished 71—290, good enough to earn her $2,396 and to push her earnings for the year to more than $100,000.

Tour rookie Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., finished with a 73—295 and won $939 while Dale Shaw of Victoria, closing with a 79, missed the money with her 304 total.

Styles vary, but work for Burrards, Adanacs

Times News Services

Vancouver Burrards and Coquitlam Adanacs used different systems Saturday but achieved the same result — victory in Western Lacrosse Association games.

At Nanaimo, Coquitlam jumped out to an 8-2 lead in the first period and went on to beat Nanaimo Timbermen 17-10 and retain sole possession of second place, two points ahead of Vancouver.

Doug Hayes led Vancouver with six goals while Eric Otterstrom had four and Ron Pender three. Stuart Aird added two and Burrards' singles came from Mike McMillan, Bill Foote, Terry Bingley and Dan Perrault.

New Westminster goals came from Bob Tasker (3), Len Cimminelli (2), Gilles Bezeau (2), Wayne Goss (2), Derek Dickson (2), Mario Govorchin (2), Ken Brown, Jack Fulton and Eric Cowieson.

Esquimalt gains

Esquimalt Universal Sheet Metal moved into a tie for second place with Saanich Metro Honda by tripping G & W Landscaping 10-4 in one of two Victoria Senior "B" Lacrosse League games played Sunday night at Pearkes Arena.

In the other tussle, Victoria Athletics padded their first-place margin by blasting Saanich, 19-8.

Randy Bryant set the pace for Esquimalt with five goals and two assists while Brian Spaven added three and four and Rick Leggett chipped in one and five. Bill Kaye (two and one) led Landscapers.

Dwayne Ferguson sparked Athletics with five goals, Kevin Kennedy added four and two and Robbie Clifford and Bill Marechek each contributed three and five. Duncan Jacob and Tom Lothian each scored twice for Saanich.

It was breeze for Bean

ATLANTA (AP) — "No doubt, that's the best I've played in a long time, if not the best I've ever played," said Andy Bean, after turning the Atlanta golf tournament into the easiest triumph on the Professional Golfers' Association tour in three years.

"It was ridiculous how good he played," said the distant runnerup, Joe Inman, who finished eight shots behind the 6-foot-4 Bean, who had a closing five-under-par 67 Sunday for a course-record 265, 23 shots under par.

It was the biggest total under par since Johnny Miller captured the 1975 Tucson Open with a 25-under figure and the biggest margin of victory on tour since Ray Floyd won the 1976 Masters by eight shots.

"For once, I guess, I thought a little bit and kept myself out of trouble," said Bean, who carried a five-shot lead into the final round after a record-setting 61 Saturday.

"It was like he was saying, 'forget it, boy. You're playing for second,' " Inman said.

Inman was the only player within 10 shots, using his closing 70 to finish at 15-under-par 273.

David Graham and Grier Jones were deadlocked at 276, with Graham shooting a 67 and Jones a 70. Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller nailed down the fifth position with a 74—277 and Wally Armstrong was next with a 67—279.

Dave Barr of Kelowna won $642 with a final-round 77 for a 293 total.

CAR
RENTALS
Our rates are a pleasant surprise!

At Tilden, it's our policy for every station to have its rates printed and displayed—because we don't want you to think that we charge "what the traffic will bear"!

Also, we think it's gimmicky to feature absurd "come-on" prices when the real cost ends up being the kind of surprise you don't need—once you've figured it out! What we feature is what you pay!

So next time you need wheels, get them with no gimmicks—from Tilden. And as we include 200 kilometres on the house per day at most of our stations, we think you'll find our rates an even more pleasant surprise!

Tournament honors to Mears, Vicettes

One comeback bid bore fruit but another withered on the vine in two softball tournaments that concluded Sunday.

Jack Mears Realty of the Heywood Avenue League won three successive games to climax a comeback through the losers' bracket and win the Capital Builders-Labatts invitational men's softball tournament at Macdonald Park.

But a rally by Vancouver Merchants fell short as VI 90 Vicettes won the Walter Yeamans invitational women's tournament at Hyacinth Park.

Jack Mears topped Eldorado Hotel of Vancouver 6-2 in the deciding game of the two-day, double-loss elimination tourney after toppling the same squad from unbeaten ranks with a 5-4 decision.

Eldorado had dropped Jack Mears into the losers' bracket with a 1-0 win earlier in the day but the Realty squad came back by eliminating D.J. Sports, 3-0.

Barry Moen of Jack Mears was selected as the most valuable player in the tourney while Barry Birch of Labatts earned batting laurels with a .700 average and Al Herbertson of D.J. Sports was picked as the top pitcher.

Selected to the all-star team were pitcher Greg Gagne of Jack Mears, catcher Bill Garieby of Eldorado, first baseman Dave Chewpoy of Birch Builders of the Macdonald League, second baseman Fred Voysey of D.J. Sports, third baseman Bert Tanner of Cassidy Hotel, shortstop Ted King of Sidney Hotel of the Sidney League and outfielders Birch, Vic Malli of Cassidy Inn and Ben Schuman of Birch Builders.

At Hyacinth Park, Vicettes won the deciding game against Merchants 5-1 after the Vancouver club gained a second chance with a 1-0 decision.

Merchants had come out of the losers' bracket to meet Vicettes by beating Nanaimo Lakeside Mercury, 2-1.

In earlier games, Merchants blasted Bemister's Welding 15-2 and Vicettes topped Lakeside 6-3.

All of the individual awards, however, went to visiting players.

Alyce Nasadyke of Merchants was chosen as the most valuable player, clubmate Sue Shanall collected laurels as the top pitcher and Marilyn Cooper of Nanaimo Lakeside was the top batter.

UCT TAKES RUTH TITLE

Patterson UCT of the Reynolds League edged York Electric of Esquimalt 8-7 Sunday to win the week-long Babe Ruth inter-league baseball tournament at Lambrick Park.

Pattersons tied the game in the bottom of the seventh inning when Lyle Ritchie singled in Steve Dietrich, who had contributed a solo home run to the offence in the third inning.

Danny Michaels led the scorefest for Saanich with three touchdowns and four converts while Jim Smith added a pair of TDs and Danny Pollock added one.

Robert Dorval also scored three touchdowns to lead the Juan de Fuca attack and Dean McWilliams added a single major. Neil Ford and John Kohr scored TDs for Victoria.

The final will be played Saturday at the same site.

Bo named best Canadian

CALGARY (CP) — Mark Laskin of Edmonton rode to the greatest show jumping victory of his life Sunday on the eve of the day the Canadian Equestrian Federation will decide who will ride for Canada at the Pan-American Games.

Laskin, 22, was given a good chance to make the team before the Spruce Meadows National horse show, but after winning its premier class he will be hard to overlook.

Course designer Pamela Carruthers of England set the toughest grand prix course in the history of the Calgary show, and five horses responded with two clean rounds in the $15,000 Fleischmann's Grand Prix of Canada.

Bo Mearns of Victoria set what appeared to be a winner's pace in a jump-off, clearing the track in 37.7 seconds. Only Laskin could beat her aboard Montreal Olympic silver-medal horse "Branch County." He shaved two-tenths of a second from Mearns' pace, also in a clean ride.

Mearns, also considered a shoo-in for the Pan-Am team, was named the show's winner of the Chrysler of Canada award as the leading Canadian rider, as well as the Spruce Meadows open jumper championship. Laskin also took a third-place finish in Sunday's Grand Prix aboard "Damuraz."

In the afternoon's other featured jumper event, the $7,500 Northwood Mills Cup, Californian Linda Allen continued her winning ways on "Union Jack," with Alberta Kley of Spruce Meadows second and Judi Gorsline of Edmonton third.

The four-day show's premier hunter class, the $5,000 Westburne National Hunter Classic, was won by Lu Thomas of San Carlos, Calif., on "Fantastico." Thomas also won the Spruce Meadows Open Hunter championship based on her performance in five classes.

Mearns shook loose from a flu bug to win the $10,0000 Royal Bank Challenge Cup Saturday. She felt it was a crucial win for herself and her horse, The Flying Nun, a combination that had not found the winner's circle at a major show this year.

Four horses had advanced to the first jump-off round, but the Nun was the only one successful in a bid for a second clean ride. Lundy finished second with a three-quarter time fault.

Movie star shares second at Le Mans

Times News Services

Newman, driving a Porsche 935 turbo with Dick Barbour of San Diego and West German Rolf Stommelen, came tantalizingly near beating the victors, brothers Don and Bill Whittington of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., running a similar car with another German racer, Klaus Ludwig.

Although Newman, 54, modestly said Barbour and Stommelen did the lion's share of the racing, in tough conditions with hours of pouring rain, Barbour said: "Newman is a real professional. He lapped as fast as we had all planned."

The Whittington brothers, who are in only their second season of auto racing although both have impressive records as aircraft racers, covered an official 2,592.01 miles in the 24 hours, at an average speed of 107.99 miles an hour to finish 59 miles ahead of Newman, Barbour and Stommelen.

The other top places were taken by another Porsche 935, driven by the French crew of Francois Servanin, Laurent Ferrier and Francois Trisconi, a less modified Porsche 934 with the Swiss crew of Herbert Muller, Angelo Pallavicini and Marco Vanoli, and a Rondeau driven by French rally stars Jean Ragnotti and Bernard Darniche.

A track official was seriously injured Saturday night when he was hit by a Chevron sports car driven by Frenchman Marc Sourd. The official, Serge Morel, was trying to clean an oil spill from the track when the accident occurred.

Also with the auto racers . . .

At Lexington, Ohio, Briton Alan Jones, averaging a record 100.138 miles an hour, raced to an apparent 41-second win over Keke Rosberg of Finland in a Can-Am Challenge Cup series race. However, Rosberg's manager filed an official protest of the result, criticizing Jones' driving tactics, and the dispute was turned over to Sports Car Club of America stewards.

Heavy favorites George Follmer and Al Holbert dropped out early with engine woes. Rosberg's teammate, Elliott Forbes-Robinso) of La Crescenta, Calif., finished third and Rocky Moran of Pasadena was fourth.

In Milwaukee, A. J. Foyt, a four-time winner of the Indianapolis 500, had little trouble winning the Rex Mays 150-mile championship. Foyt finished 14 seconds ahead of Billy Vukovich. Tom Bigelow of Whitewater, Wis., was third, while Canadian Cliff Hucul of Prince George was fourth. Larry Dixon finished fifth.

At Riverside, Calif., Bobby Allison took over the lead 125 kilometres from the finish when Cale Yarborough and Darrell Waltrip ran into problems and the leader of stock car racing's Alabama Gang motored on to a comfortable victory in a 400-kilometre stock car race. Allison finished 33 seconds ahead of Waltrip, 35 seconds ahead of Jimmy Insolo, and 40 seconds ahead of the frustrated Yarborough.

At Trenton, N.J., Bobby Unser broke a three-year victory drought when he swept both ends of Championship Auto Racing Team-sanctioned Trenton Twin-Indy. He was six seconds better than runner-up Wally Dallenbach in the second.

Spectators die as racer goes out of control

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — At least four persons died Sunday when a drag racer traveling more than 160 kilometres an hour went out of control and slammed into a group of spectators standing in a prohibited zone at the edge of the Yellow Belly Drag Strip.

Track officials said five other persons were taken to hospital with injuries after a 1967 Camaro driven by D. C. Thomas went out of control into a group of about 100 spectators, who had been warned repeatedly to stay off the track.

Thomas suffered lacerations to an arm.

Five veterans from Victoria earn honors

TACOMA — It was in track and field, but Victoria's five representatives in the 10th annual Western Washington Cinder Classic at Spanaway Park came through with an impressive batting average. They all won.

Heading the performances was 68-year-old Herb Plattner of the Flying Y. He won the shot put with a 12.08-metre toss and the discus, breaking the Canadian native record for his age group (60-69) with a 41.5-metre effort. The former record was 40.82.

Y teammate Jack Carson, 52, also was a double winner, establishing meet records in the mile (5:17.6) and the javelin (30.18 metres).

Rafe Duke, 48, of the Y won his specialties — the 100-yard dash in 11.2 and the 220 in 25.2.

Gerard Dumas of Victoria Track Club and Derek Ellis of the Y also won events in the 40-49 division. Dumas won the pole vault (3.60 metres) and Ellis won the three-mile race (17:44.8).

Auto racing feeling pains from climbing cost of fuel

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

It isn't the fuel shortage that's giving automobile racing a gas pain, it's the cost of the stuff.

Bud Gorder of Spokane, president of the Canadian American Modified Racing Association, expressed concern over the spiralling cost of racing during Saturday night's 19th running of the Daffodil Cup for open wheel modified and sprint cars at Western Speedway.

A crowd of 2,735 saw Doug Larson of Quesnel win the 50-lap main event for the second year in a row after a turn-four pileup knocked out early-leader Gordie Stuart of Alder Manor, Wash., on lap 19. Larson threaded neatly through traffic to take the lead for good on lap 33.

"The gas shortage (in the U.S.) hasn't affected us as much as the cost," Gorder explained. "If you live down there you can always find enough gas to get to the border and when we're racing in the States we arrange with the promoters to provide enough gas to get home.

Western Speedway manager Tony Mortel agreed.

"I've been doing a lot of thinking about the future of auto racing and how we're going to combat inflation," he said. "We've just put in a quarter-million dollar facility here (Western's new steel and concrete grandstand) and we've got to make sure racing doesn't fold up on us."

The open wheel cars don't run on gasoline but use methanol, an alcohold-based fuel. The price of methanol has skyrocked to $100 for a 45-gallon barrel, good for about two nights of racing, Mortel pointed out.

"It costs 75 cents to race one lap," he said.

Many drivers travel from race to race in motor homes to beat the high cost of motels and meals, but they're now caught in the gas price squeeze.

Even so, 20 cars made it to the track Saturday and 18 timed in.

Among the missing, however, were Blaine and Jan Sneva of Spokane, younger brothers of Indianapolis 500 drivers Tom and Jerry Sneva.

"I found out that they apparently broke down on the way and decided they could't make it," Mortel explained. "I believe that to be true because I've known the family for years and if anybody will make a race it's Edsol (the father and man in charge of the Sneva racing operation)."

The lone Victoria entry, Jerry Vantreight, had mechanical problems all evening and was forced to slow down after the 25th lap of the main event. He wasn't among the front-runners at the finish.

Seventeen cars started the feature and Stuart was the first casualty when Jack Cross of Vancouver spun out on a water slick and crashed into the leader. Rebel Jackson of Seattle took the lead after the restart and held it until Larson took charge.

A Dash: 1. Pat Jessmore, Winthrop, Wash.; 2. Jack Cross, Vancouver; 3. Doug Larson, Quesnel; 4. Marty White, Kamloops.

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian All-Stars defeated United States Eagles 19-12 in an international rugby game during the weekend.

The Canadian team, represented by 14 British Columbia players, one from Edmonton and veteran captain Mike Luke of St. John's, Nfld., got 12 points from Preston Wiley on four penalty goals. Spence McTavish added a try and Jim Donaldson a drop goal.

The U.S. team got all of its points from world all-star team member Dennis Jablonski of California, who had three penalty goals and a drop goal.

Veteran pitcher tosses no-hitter at Seaboard

Veteran Denny Sullivan of Port Angeles Telecable fashioned a no-hitter Sunday to help the Washington squad to a split of its Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League doubleheader with Seaboard Construction.

Sullivan retired 18 batters in a row before an error by shortstop Tom Gagnon spoiled the pitcher's bid for perfection. Sullivan retired the final three in quick order and settled for a 1-0, no-hit victory over Seaboard.

A bases-empty homer by Wayne Forland and a three-run clout by Paul Morrison in the sixth inning helped Seaboard to a 5-4 victory over Port Angeles in the second game at Central Park.

In another game, Len Carolan allowed only two hits — a single by Bob Butterworth and a home run by Mike Lee — but suffered from shaky defensive support and Juan de Fuca Builders dropped a 5-2 decision to K&R Sooke.

Batters dominated a pair of Heywood Men's League games. They connected for a 42 hits as Victoria Athletics and Ingraham Hotel split an afternoon doubleheader.

Athletics, with Ryan Talbot collecting three hits and driving in two runs, won the opener 8-4. Randy Epp and Gary Willyman each banged out three and Ross Swanton added a pair, including a two-run homer, as the Hotelmen won the nighteap 9-4.

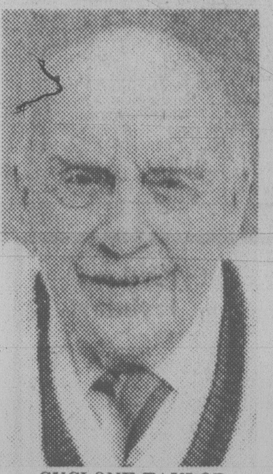
Many believed Cyclone was best all-time hockey player

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hockey great Fred (Cyclone) Taylor was two weeks away from his 94th birthday when he died in his sleep early Saturday at a private nursing home in Vancouver.



CYCLONE TAYLOR
. . . dies at 93

Taylor, whose skating speed and hockey skills have become legendary, became the first living member to be admitted to the Hockey Hall of Fame when he was inducted in 1947.

He was one of the last 60-minute players in professional hockey and was described by many observers during his career as the greatest of all players.

Eddie Shore of Boston Bruins said there was no comparison between Taylor and players of Shore's day. Lester Patrick, at that time manager of New York Rangers, said Taylor was the best hockey player of all time.

Taylor ended his 18-year pro career in 1923 with more than 500 points at a time when assists were rarely counted.

In seven seasons with the Vancouver Millionaires — from 1913 to 1919 — he scored 245 points, including 148 goals, in 126 games. He was league scoring champion for five of those seasons. In the 1918-19 season, Taylor had 32 goals in 18 games.

Taylor led the Millionaires to a Stanley Cup victor in 1915.

He despised rough play, saying he was paid to play hockey and not sit in the penalty box. Taylor said he didn't think he averaged more than four penalties a season.

He ascribed his amazing skating ability and speed as a gift from God.

He earned the nickname Cyclone while playing with Ottawa Senators in 1909. Taylor scored five goals in his first game and an Ottawa sports writer wrote: "He may have been known as the whirlwind of the International League but he certainly is the cyclone of the Eastern Canada Senior Hockey League."

Former hockey and lacrose great Newsy Lalonde said few players today can skate as fast forward as Cyclone did backwards.

In 1910, while with Renfrew Millionaires in Ontario, he skated backwards through the opposing team, circled the goal, and scored, still skating backwards.

Taylor played every position except goal. He became the highest-paid player of his day and made all-star each season. A rushing defenceman, Taylor played on two Stanley Cup championship teams and twice led the playoffs in scoring.

Taylor was born in Tara, Ont. June 23, 1885, one of five children. The family later moved to Listowel, Ont.

His first sport interests were soccer and lacrosse. In 1902 and 1904 he played on Ontario championship hockey teams and was a lacrosse star with Listowel, Ottawa and Vancouver.

The first hockey team to pay Taylor was Portage La Prairie of the Manitoba Senior League. From there, he went to Houghton, Michigan, and Portage Lakes of the International Hockey League.

In 1909 he went to Ottawa for $1,000 a season. He was signed by Renfrew Millionaires in 1910 and was paid $5,250 for a 12-game season — the highest salary ever paid a hockey player at that time.

Taylor returned to Ottawa two seasons later.

He joined Vancouver Millionaires for the 1912-1913 season and was with them for seven seasons during which time the team dominated the Pacific Coast League and won the Stanley Cup in 1915.

He returned to hockey in 1937 as president of the Pacific Coast League in 1937, and resigned the position four years later. He then resumed his service with the immigration service, becoming commissioner for British Columbia and the Yukon before retiring in 1950.

Taylor flew to the USSR with Kelowna on a 1958 hockey tour, and when he returned, predicted the Soviet players would, within a decade, rival and eventually surpass Canadian athletes performing in the National Hockey League.

His last public appearance was May 23, when he attended the annual B.C. Sports Hall of Fame banquet of champions in Vancouver.

In other Sunday matches, Incogs stayed on top by beating Oak Bay by 17 runs at Windsor and Albion kept pace with Alcos by posting an eight-wicket decision over Castaways at Beacon Hill Park.

British rider wins

CALGARY (CP) — Malcom Rathmell of Great Britain, riding a Montessa, won the seventh race of the 12-event world championship motorcycle trials Sunday. Another Briton, Martin Lampkin, was second.

Harvard crew snaps record

LEDYARD, Conn. (AP) — In the closest varsity eight-oared race since Yale last won in 1962, Harvard captured its 17th consecutive Yale-Harvard regatta title Saturday by slightly more than a half length.

Harvard's winning time was 19 minutes 22.9 seconds, a new upstream record for the four-mile race on the Thames River. The old course record of 19:37.2 had stood since 1969.

Title for Irish girl

NAIRN, Scotland (AP) — Maureen Madill of Ireland defeated Jane Lock of Australia 2 and 1 Saturday to take the women's British Amateur golf championship.

She was the first Irish winner of the title since 1957.

Madill, 21, from Londonderry, was two up at the turn and seemed to have the match wrapped up when she took the 13th and 14th, with an eagle and a birdie.

Lock, 24, from Melbourne, took the next two holes, but the 17th was halved and that gave the title to Madill.

Sigel beats Hoch

SOUTHPORT, England (Reuter) — Jay Sigel, a 34-year-old insurance broker from Philadelphia, won a seven-hour duel in the sun with his U.S. Walker Cup team-mate Scott Hoch to take the men's British Amateur golf crown Saturday.

Sigel beat the 23-year-old Hoch 3 and 2 in the 36-hole final after surviving a counter-attack that cost him a three-hole halfway lead.

For Sigel, the first recipient of an Arnold Palmer golf scholarship in 1967 at Wake Forest University, the win was his first major success.

Playoff-ticketed Islanders establishing solid reputation

It's beginning to look as if Goodwill Bottling Islanders of Victoria might play a more solid role than just appearing as the host team when the Canadian intermediate "A" lacrosse championships are held in Victoria, Aug. 22-26.

Jim Lightbody, Shawn Dheensaw and Frank Wendt each scored three goals Sunday to lead Islanders to a 16-15 victory over Vancouver in a B.C. Intermediate "A" Lacrosse League game at Vancouver's Trout Lake Arena.

The win extended Islanders' unbeaten streak to seven games (5-0-2) and padded their hold on first place.

Kevin Mutch was the top gun for Vancouver with five goals while doubles were contributed by Grant Shavor, Tony Vandrasco, Bruce Davidson and Geoff Kendull. Ray Richards and Rudy Eisner had singles.

Goaltender Herb Isherwood played a vital role in the Islander victory with a total of 42 saves while Randy Lewis of Vancouver blocked 36 shots.

TOO MUCH FOR BID IN BELMONT STAKES

By ED SCHUYLER JR.

NEW YORK (AP) — Class was the foundation of Coastal's upset victory in the Belmont Stakes, says trainer David Whiteley, while trainer Buddy Delp thinks Spectacular Bid's downfall might have been caused by a safety pin.

"He was never trained to run 1½ miles," the 34-year-old Whiteley said Sunday of Coastal, who before the Belmont had raced only three times this year — winning at six furlongs, seven furlongs and 1⅛ miles.

"He won on class . . . and the jockey rode a fine race."

Shortly after the running of the 1½-mile Belmont Saturday, Delp said: "The best horse won the race. We have no excuses."

But Sunday morning at Pimlico in Baltimore, Delp told reporters Bid had stepped on a safety pin before the race and he and owners Harry, Teresa and Tom Meyerhoff had discussed scratching the colt from the race.

Delp said he showed up at Bid's barn at 5:45 a.m. and "I soon discovered he was lame."

The trainer said when groom Mo Hall removed bandages from Bid, an open safety pin had fallen into the straw and the colt, in pawing around, got it lodged in his left front foot. The pin went in about an inch and drew blood, Delp said.

"We cleaned and tubbed the wound, and it appeared OK," Delp said. "Besides, you can't win the Belmont by staying in the barn."

Delp's son Gerald, who works for his father, said Bid's shoe was removed at noon Sunday and the foot was bruised and hemorrhaging. Although it was the same foot, the younger Delp said it was not felt the bruise or the hemorrhaging was caused by the pin.

Jockey Ronnie Franklin, who returned to Baltimore with Delp shortly after the race, said: "I really didn't get into the horse. I didn't want to abuse him because I knew he was really hurting."

However, films showed Franklin had Bid in a drive down the backstretch and whipped him left-handed through the final eighth of a mile.

Bid left Sunday morning for Baltimore without the jewel most people felt he was a cinch to add to his already glittering record. He came north with 12 straight stakes victories, seven of them this year. They included the Kentucky Derby and Preakness.

For much of the 1½-mile Belmont it looked as though the dark grey would become thoroughbred racing's third consecutive Triple Crown winner. Then, as the crowd of 59,180 urged Bid on, Coastal, ridden by Ruben Hernandez, shot through the stretch along the rail to turn the Triple Crown dream into a nightmare.

Golden Act finished second and Spectacular Bid wound up third.

"I felt sorry for him," said Lucien Laurin, in whose barn Bid stayed. "You hate to see a good horse lose."

Before the race, Laurin, who trained 1973 Triple Crown champion Secretariat, warned that Coastal "was going to be awfully tough to beat."

"I told you," Laurin said Sunday. "Boy, those fresh horses are tough."

As for having a fresh horse, Whiteley said, "Yesterday it was very significant. Last year, the fresh horses were distanced." In 1978, Affirmed and Alydar continued their Derby and Preakness duels with a two-horse race in the Belmont which gave Affirmed the Triple Crown.

Coastal wasn't nominated for the Belmont, and the decision to run him wasn't made until a few days before the race.

"Two days after the Peter Pan (May 27 at Belmont), we had no thoughts of the Belmont," Whiteley said. The 1⅛-mile Peter Pan, which was used as a springboard to Belmont victory by Stage Door Johnny in 1968, was won by Coastal by 13 lengths in 1:47.

"Then I started thinking about it from reading the papers," said Whiteley, who talked it over with owner William Haggin Perry. It cost Perry $5,000 to enter Coastal and another $15,000 to start him.

For a while Saturday, Whiteley thought it was $20,000 wasted. "I thought he was dead at the five-eighths pole, but I was hoping he could make it up in the next three-eighths or half-mile," said the trainer.

"David asked me if I thought he could go a mile and a half, and I said I thought he could," Hernandez said after Coastal ran the distance in 2:28 3-5 for his winning 3¼-length margin.

"I'm very happy. This is very important to me."

Another jockey who was happy — he actually appeared to be as happy as Hernandez — was Angel Cordero Jr., who had been feuding with Franklin and had a fight with him in the jockeys' room last Wednesday.

After finishing seventh on General Assembly, Cordero told reporters: "Look at your super horse now, guys, and I hope you write that down."

There was some criticism of Franklin's ride in the Belmont — that he moved Bid into the lead too soon. Bid reached the three-quarter mile mark in 1:11 1-5 and was timed in 1:36 for the mile and 2:02 2-5 for 1¼ miles.

Whiteley said he had no idea what Coastal's next race would be, but Delp's plans for Spectacular Bid were to send him to Saratoga in August for possibly the Jim Dandy and then the Travers. Plans then call for Spectacular Bid to run in the Marlboro Stakes and the Woodward in the fall.

The loss almost certainly knocked out a possible match race between Bid and Affirmed, and the injured foot could change the other plans.

The tough Golden Act, who finished a neck ahead of Bid under Sandy Hawley to add a Belmont second to his third in the Derby and second in the Preakness, was headed home to California for a rest.

The complete order of finish after Spectacular Bid was Screen King, King Celebrity, Gallant Best, General Assembly and Mystic Era.

Coastal, who earned $161,400 from a purse of $269,000, paid $10.80, $4.80 and $2.10. Golden Act returned $5.40 and $2.10, and Bid, the 1-5 favorite, returned $2.10 in becoming the ninth three-year-old to win the Derby and Preakness only to lose the Belmont.

Lumber pressure stays on Farmers

Unbeaten Mike Squire and Rick Shenton are helping second-place Lumberworld keep pressure on pace-setting Farmer Construction in the Senior Amateur Baseball League.

Lumberworld sliced a game off Farmers' advantage by sweeping a Sunday doubleheader from Quadra Warehouse, 10-2 and 8-3. Squire boosted his won-lost pitching record to 5-0 by scattering five hits in the opener while Shenton won his second straight decision in the nightcap at Lambrick Park.

Playing-manager Russ Holmes sparked Lumberworld's offense with a four-for-seven batting performance, including a three-for-three effort in the nightcap.

Stephen Badger, who won three events, and Jeff Riddle, both of Edmonton, shared the senior men's award.

Upset in singles

Play went according to form in men's singles play but an upset was featured in women's singles competition as action opened at the weekend in the annual Oak Bay Tennis Club championship tournament.

Top-seeded Tony Simnett and third-ranked John Nichol square off in a semi-final match at 5:30 tonight after close victories. Simnett downed Mike Sheikh 6-4, 7-5 while Nichol ousted Neil Coutts, 4-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Save $500 on a Honda Civic.

One of the reasons why Honda Civics have become the best selling* small cars in Canada is because they come with almost everything on. Now the cars with almost everything on have something off. Right now, manufacturer's previous suggested list prices have been reduced by $500 on a Civic Sedan or CVCC, and $400 on a Civic Hatchback or Station Wagon. Imagine that, $400 or $500 off and they still come with almost everything on. Front wheel drive, independent suspension, tinted windows, reclining bucket seats, carpeting and much more are all still on. And all still standard. And every Honda model rates among the best when it comes to gas mileage. That's $500 off Honda Civic Sedans and CVCC's. And $400 off Honda Civic Hatchbacks and Wagons. While supplies last.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 ♣	Dble
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡

Opening lead — jack of clubs.

Most players prefer natural bidding, but there is much to be said in favor of some of the artificial methods used in tournaments. Consider this deal played by Italy and the United States in the 1965 world championship. At the first table, with Schenken and Leventritt North-South for the U.S., the bidding went as shown.

One notrump indicated 15 to 18 points. Two clubs was Stayman; it asked South to bid a four-card major if he had one. East (Avarelli, playing with Belladonna) doubled to show clubs. From then on, the bidding was natural and Leventritt had no trouble making four hearts. He lost two trump tricks and a club.

At the second table, the bidding was more spirited, and also much more artificial. With Garozzo and Forquet North-South for Italy, the bidding went:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	2 NT(!)
Pass	5 ◇(!)	Pass	Pass
Dble

The one club bid by Forquet had nothing whatever to do with his club length. It merely indicated he had at least 17 high-card points. Theoretically, Forquet could have had almost any distribution.

North's one spade response was also artificial; it was only a coincidence that Garozzo actually had a spade suit. His spade bid indicated either one ace and one king, or three kings.

The two notrump bid by East (Mrs. Dorothy Hayden, playing with this writer) was the so-called unusual notrump convention. It announced great length in both minor suits. My leap to five diamonds was an attempt to short-circuit the major-suit game it seemed certain our opponents could make.

The Italians thus found themselves faced with a five diamond bid — and had not yet bid a real suit! They did the best they could by doubling, but the two-trick defeat brought the U.S. team a gain of 320 points.

Tomorrow: The king can do no wrong.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Peter pointed to a printed Notice on the fence as they passed a construction site. "That's a funny number," he said. "I guess it's the building permit."

"That's right, but why funny?" Stan asked. "You mean because the first three figures are the same as the other three?"

"Partly," the boy replied. "It's also just seven times the square of each half."

Thanks for idea to T. Gifco, Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan.

Linton's bold bid spoiled by Billy

An honest workman, Keith Linton tired to "steal" the featured race at Sandown Park on Saturday. He couldn't because Billy Barker lived up to his reputation as one of Western Canada's leading pacers.

Linton still managed to share the day's limelight with Billy Barker with another successful afternoon. The meet's leading driver won three races, placed second twice and was third once to improve his sparkling success percentage to .533.

Linton now has 21 victories, 19 seconds and six show finishes in 63 drives.

The meet's second dead heat, again for second place, came in the sixth when judges were unable to separate Robbie Boy and Babrow. The winner, Combat Lands, also was involved in the three-horse photo but came out on top.

Bikini by a nose in Klondike 'Cap

VANCOUVER (CP) — Highly-favored Kiwi Bikini got up in the last desperate stride to catch Seattle invader Cupid's Cross and win the $13,550 Klondike Handicap Saturday at Exhibition Park.

Jockey Mark Walker overcame traffic problems with a furlong remaining in the mile and 1-16th contest for three-year-olds and got Kiwi Bikini in front by a nose at the wire. Red Desert was third, 3 1-2 lengths behind the leaders.

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — A surprise defeat at the hands of Bayern Munich and a stadium wrecked by rampaging fans spoiled the victory celebration Saturday of newly-crowned West German soccer champion Hamburg SV.

Munich beat Hamburg 2-1 in their season finale at the Volkspark Stadium and rescue helicopters landed on the field minutes after the final whistle when fans tore down an iron fence, trampling and badly injuring other spectators while swarming on the grounds.

One victory for Canada

TURIN, Italy (CP) — Middle-distance runner John Craig salvaged the lone Canadian victory at a two-day, four-country men's track meet when he bolted from a tight pack to win the 1,500-metre event Saturday.

The Canadians arrived hours before Friday's opening events after a 16-hour train trip from England, where they had completed in a similar three-country meet.

"I couldn't see anywhere clear, so I risked being disqualified and just pushed through," the Toronto runner said of his winning performance.

"It really was just a warm-up for us," Penke said Saturday, "but the Europeans were using the event as a selection meet for the European Cup."

Pole-vaulter Bruce Simpson, who won a gold for Canada at the London meet, had to settle for third here behind two Poles. Kozakiewicz, Klimiczyk and Simpson all reached the same distance, 5.20 metres, but the Toronto jumper took third on the basis of more misses at that height.

Highlighting the meet was Pole Ireneusz Golda, who stretched his national hammer record to 74.22 metres. Canadians Fred Sommer of Montreal and Jack Harkness of Uxbridge, Ont., trailed the field with throws of 54.68 and 43.12 metres respectively.

Menea of Italy scored an easy victory in the 200 metres with a time of 20.69. The two Canadian entries finished in the middle of the field, Desai Williams of Toronto fifth in 21.21 and Tony Sharpe, Toronto, sixth in 21.29.

The young Canadian squad was a distant finisher in the 3,000-metre steeplechase, won by Malinowski of Poland in 3:22.0. Greg Duhaime of Uxbridge was seventh in 8:36.3 while Rob Evans of Montreal finished eighth (8:55.7).

FAA raked over coals on DC-10s

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of a U.S. House of Representatives subcommittee said today the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) "exposed passengers and crew members to potential danger" by allowing DC-10 jetliners to continue flying after the Chicago crash which killed 275 persons.

As the subcommittee opened hearings into the FAA's certification procedures, Representative John Burton (Dem.—Calif.) said the agency's "yo-yo-like activities have not inspired confidence."

The FAA three times required U.S.-registered DC-10s to undergo inspections before finally suspending the design certificate of all DC-10s last Wednesday.

"We have not been hesitant to take those actions merited by our assessment of the information made available to us and we will not be hesitant to take whatever actions are warranted as information comes to light in the future," said FAA administrator Langhorne Bond, the first witness before the subcommittee.

Asked by Burton what actions the airlines must take before the suspension is lifted, Bond replied: "We are not at present prepared to reinstate the certificate. We are looking at the problem. We have probably more than 100 people working on the problem."

Burton, long a critic of Bond, said the FAA caused "chaos, confusion and a widespread lack of confidence," by its "pattern of vacillation" on the DC-10 grounding.

He said the FAA "gave the final spin of the yo-yo" last week when it first fought a court order to ground the DC-10 fleet; then, after getting a stay in the order, went ahead and grounded the planes itself.

"He's a disaster," Burton said of Bond last week. "His constant changing of mind about this DC-10, for instance, had endangered lives. This and other evidence shows that he just doesn't know what he is doing."

Another witness expected to be called was Philip Hogue, who until Thursday was a member of the National Transportation Safety Board, the agency that investigates airplane accidents.

On Friday, the day after Hogue's three-year term ended, the Airline Passengers Association — an organization of air travellers that sued to ground the DC-10 — announced he was taking over as director of the association's newly created Washington office.

At a board briefing after last month's crash of an American Airlines DC-10 in Chicago, Hogue said he would ground the DC-10s if the choice were his and that he wouldn't fly on the plane until some questions were answered.

On Sunday, the FAA ordered engine mount inspections on all L-1011s and two other models of wide-bodied jets operating in the United States, although a spokesman said "we have no indication, no information there is anything wrong with any of these aircraft." The other aircraft involved are the Boeing 747 and the A-300 Airbus manufactured by a European consortium.

Meanwhile, in Montreal, both of Canada's main airlines said they had already completed checks on the engine mounts of their wide-bodied aircraft before the FAA issued its order.

An Air Canada spokesman said inpections of the Crown corporation's L-1011 Tristars were completed a week ago and that the airline had just finished checking the mounts on its Boeing 747s.

Gold brings record price once again

LONDON (AP) — Gold hit a record $282.875 U.S. an ounce today, pushed up by alarm over oil supplies and high prices. The U.S. dollar registered slight gains and losses.

The gold record was set in Zurich, where the metal closed Friday at $280.125, the previous all-time mark.

In London, gold also opened at a record — $282.125 — and within an hour was trading at $282.625, a new high for that bullion market.

U.S. atom test tickles Los Vegas

PAHUTE MESA, Nev. (UPI) — A nuclear weapon buried beneath the volcanic rock of Pahute Mesa was triggered today sending earth shock waves which were felt slightly in Las Vegas 110 miles away.

The Department of Energy said the underground nuclear test, codenamed Pepato, had a yield of 20-150 kilotons, meaning a maximum equivalent of 150,000 tons of TNT.

The nuclear test originally was scheduled for June 1 but was delayed on several occasions because of adverse winds at the Nevada Test Site.

The 150-kiloton maximum yield announced for the test is within the limits of a threshhold treaty negotiated with Russia several years ago which has yet to be ratified by the U.S. Senate.

Longshoremen voting on pact

B.C. longshoremen began voting today on a tentative contract which could end the strike which has closed seven west Coast ports for a week.

Union president Bob Peebles said if the contract is accepted the ports could be reopened this weekend.

The 3,500 members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union whose strike has halted vital shipments through major B.C. ports, are to hold ratification votes by Thursday, Peebles said. Meetings are to be held today, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The union negotiating committee is recommending acceptance of the settlement. No details of the settlement have been released.

Peebles said he has no way of knowing if the workers will accept the agreement.

"We've recommended acceptance before," he said.

During previous negotiations, three tentative agreements were rejected by either union negotiators or the membership. The last offer was rejected by only one vote.

That offer called for increases of 90 cents an hour in each year of a three-year contract. The current base pay rate is $9.10 an hour.

Kelly was sent here Thursday by Labor Minister Lincoln Alexander to resolve the impasse. The settlement was reached after a total of 20 hours of talks on Friday and Sat.

There were fears that Parliament might have to be recalled to deal with the dispute.

The strike has shut down the ports of Vancouver, Victoria, Prince Rupert, New Westminster, Port Alberni, Nanaimo and Chemainus.

The governments of the four Western provinces, who rely heavily on the ports, called upon Prime Minister Joe Clark to take swift action to end the dispute. Businessmen and farmers have also called for whatever steps are necessary to end the walkout.

Mayday call wins rescue for seven

Seven people were rescued unharmed early today after the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt received a Mayday call from a 37-foot pleasure craft.

The Mayday said the Seacorasel was in trouble after striking something in the Fraser River.

Names of the seven were not available.

Tentative pact offered B.C. forest workers

B.C. forest companies have offered their employees a two-year contract with a 60-cent-an-hour increase in the first year and six per cent in the second, a union spokesman said today.

Clay Perry of the International Woodworkers of America said both sides realize the offer is an initial one and doesn't mean too much at this stage of negotiations.

The union, representing about 40,000 workers in the coastal and southern interior regions, began bargaining with Forest Industrial Relations about mid-April.

The IWA is asking for an across-the-board hike of $1.50 and hour in a one-year agreement. With the base rate at $8.16 an hour, the increase would amount to 18 per cent.

The union began a strike vote May 29 and Perry said the results will likely be known Saturday. Meanwhile, talks are expected to continue today.

Students restore castles and spirits as well

By SUSAN ANDERSON

ARGY, France (NYT) — Noses running and hands reddened with cold, a dozen young people confronted a daunting pile of 17th-century beams stacked outside the Chateau d'Argy, then cheerfully carted them off to a site a kilometre away. Another group chipped, scraped and painted, while others installed electrical wiring and repaired roofing on a 17th-century farm.

This tiny village 270 kilometres southwest of Paris echoed with the sounds of hammers, cement mixers, saws and the presence of 50 students who spent their spring vacations restoring its once-derelict castle.

This summer about 8,000 young people from Europe and North America will devote their holidays to bringing to life 120 neglected castles, churches, hamlets and historic sites in France.

The loosely organized movement fulfulls two primary aims: instilling in the volunteers a respect for the architecture of the past, and saving hundreds of decrepit yet valuable buildings.

The experience is apparently great fun. "It was really wonderful," said Barbara Gault, a San Francisco graduate of Vassar College who worked last summer on a project in Burgundy. "It was hard work, but everyone loved it. I shared a tent with a French girl and we learned from each other."

A cross between summer camp and construction site, a generous dose of architecture, art and history, the chantiers, or building sites, vary in size and ambition.

The Chateau d'Argy, with its meticulously restored 16th-century keep and 17th-century towers, welcomes 200 people in the summer. During the spring vacation, a Renaissance room in which the women sleep was strewn with sleeping bags. The refectory serves as a communal dining hall. Evenings may include talks or films, or simply the strains of a guitar drifting from the river bank.

There are two principal organizations devoted to bringing young people and monuments together; they are supported financially by about 16 government ministries.

The oldest, and the pioneer of the movement, is the Club du Vieux Manoir, which actually owns the castle here operates some 16 chantiers. REMPART (acronymn for Rehabilitation et Entretien des Monuments et du Patrimoine Artistique, or Rehabilitation and Upkeep of Monuments and Artistic Heritage) is a union of local preservation groups that organizes 100 chantiers.

About 20 per cent of both groups' volunteers come from outside France, and half of those are American and Canadian. "One attraction is that they learn French and have an interesting cultural exchange with kids their own age," said Maurice Duton, the founder and president of the Club de Vieux Manoir.

Duton, who is known as Momo, and inspires something approaching reverence among the students, started it all in 1953 in his hometown of Guise in northern France. He has supervised summer camps and youth activities after the war and wanted to start his own group. "I knew a strong goal was needed to keep young people together," he said. He hit on the idea that the town's crumbling fortified castle, abandoned since the First World War, would make a nice headquarters and that fixing it up would be the fledgling group's first project.

It was an ambitious undertaking. The Chateaufort de Guise is mammoth — a 10th-century fortress dominating the Oise Valley, with three medieval bastions, vaulted passageways, ancient prisons, a vast courtyard, a medieval tower, plus the castle itself built in the 16th century by the first Duc de Guise. "It was considered a lost cause," said Pierre Lebouteux, the chief architect for historical monuments.

Youngsters pitched tents on the grounds and began cleaning up the site. By 1956 it showed visble signs of improvement and the club's reputation spread. By 1968 the club had expanded its projects to 11, one of which was Argy. To date it has taken on more than 100 restorations and completed 85.

REMPART, was created in 1966. "The main difference between us and Vieux Manoir is that our chantiers are small, about 20 people with one or two in charge, and more flexible," said Daniel Bruneau, who directed Miss Gault's chantier.

Life is similar in both groups. The young people live on the site, either in the monument or in tents on the grounds. They may be beginners or experienced in such work. "I never thought I could hammer a nail," said Regis Martin, 19 years old. "There's not much chance for kids to do something concrete, to be responsible: It's really something, to discover you can build a wall."

Despite the hard physical work, a holiday atmosphere prevailed. "It was very relaxed. You didn't have to work every day," Miss Gault said. "But the work was part of the fun." Duton believes that such activity builds character. "A bored kid might smash a window in Paris, just for the fun of it," he said. "But he would not break a window he had built himself."

The Club du Vieux Manoir seems rather more strict than other groups. "We take kids as young as 13 here," Duton explained. Brigitte d'Arcy, the on-site director, stated, "We're very tough on three points — sorties into town, safety on the site and les flirts." Boys and girls sleep in different parts of the castle. On other sites the minimum age is 15 and at REMPARTS, 16.

There is great enthusiasm on the chantiers and no audible grumbling. "There's a terrific esprit de corps when you rescue something crumbling," said Therese Beckelynck, who heads a chantier at Sarlat in the Dordogne.

Although the volunteers must get to the sites on their own, once they arrive their working vaction is cheap. At the club the daily pension covering room and board is $5, and foreign visitors are allowed to stay free after the first 15 days. At REMPART, the pension ranges from nothing to $5.

North Americans interested in REMPART may apply in the United States through the International Council on Monuments and Sites, which requires some knowledge of French. The Club du Vieux Manoir has no such requirement nor, in fact, does REMPART, if one applies directly. Applications can be made to:

International Council on Monuments and Sites, 1522 K Street N.W., Suite 530, Washington, D.C. 20005. Tel: (202) 254-3495.

ANCIENT CASTLES in France are getting a facelift these days, thanks to the efforts of an international group of young people who spend their vacations restoring ancient sites such as this 15-century abby in Sarlat, France.

'Love crisis' in society

MOOSE JAW (CP) — Society is experiencing a severe "love crisis," more serious than the energy crisis or unemployment, Father Lucien Larre, director of Regina's Bosco Home for emotionally disturbed children, said.

We live in an age of lonesome people because so many have not been loved, said Father Larre, opening a two-day conference on the emotional problems of children.

He said there are 4,000 to 5,000 reported cases of teenage suicides in Canada each year.

The problem has has reached epidemic proportions, he said, with the figure surpassed only by car accidents. But even many auto accidents involving teenagers are suicides in disguise, he said.

Society is not doing well, said Father Larre. Part of the answer may be that children are not raised properly, but it is more than that.

"Youngsters do not care what happens to them because no one cares for them," he said.

Dr. J. B. O'Regan, a Regina psychiatrist, told a workshop on teenage suicide and depression that warnings issued by potential suicides often go unrecognized or overlooked .

He said teens act out their problems when they are depressed. Symptoms may include loss of energy, weight loss, withdrawal, worry or anger.

Picky pattern-picker tips

Putting patterns together offers a challenge to experienced decorators, much less amateurs. Combining patterns has been popular these past several years, and when first portrayed in color in national magazines, the results were very daring and dramatic. Everyone had to try it, sometimes with hodgepodge results.

Patterns do warm up a room. The enveloping colors and designs somehow create intimacy and give a feeling of personal decorating. But the amateur had best stay with one pattern, even when it is used in several ways, as seen here in a bedroom by interior designer Norman Colburt.

The impact of the pattern is strong, seen as wallpaper and as fabric, not only because of the broad expanses but also because the solid color bedspread offers contrast. On the walls the paper backs up the open shelves and then repeats on the bedside cabinet doors. Pillows and dust ruffle use the fabric.

In addition to being attractive, the wall functions well, with concealed storage in the base cabinets that are used as bedside tables too. The cabinets are 57 inches wide, 30 inches high and 16 inches deep, the top and trim given a walnut finish to stand out against the wallpaper pattern. The shelves are of glass for the opposite reason, so that they will blend, not contrast, with the background. The first shelf is 21 inches above the cabinet, the others are spaced 14 inches apart.

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow with eight children. The oldest is 21 and the youngest is 10. My husband was killed a year ago and it hit me awfully hard.

Here is my problem. I'm in love. I am 40 and the kid I'm in love with is 21. We didn't intend to get serious — it just happened, and now we have this love affair going. He moved into my house about a month ago.

I loved my husband very much, but he is gone and I need someone to love. Do you think there is any future in this love affair?

IN LOVE

DEAR IN: I could be wrong, but I can't see much of a future for you and your young lover. Not so much because of the vast age difference, but because of the emotional state you were in when the affair took root. Of course you need someone to love — we all do. But for your sake and his, I think the kid should move out of your house and you should move toward men you own age.

DEAR ABBY: A woman in our office is freaking us out with her humming. When she concentrates she hums one low monotonous note. This can go on continuously for as long as two hours or more without a break.

When I call her attention to the maddening distraction, she quits for a while, then resumes humming again until I could scream.

Others have told her, too. Nothing helps. Her humming has got me so crazy I sometimes can hear it when it's not there.

GOING BANANAS

DEAR GOING: She has undoubtedly developed the humming habit over the years and now hums unconsciously. But habits are learned and can be unlearned, so the moment the hummingbird starts her song, remind her that she's distracting you. And keep reminding her.

Seniors deserve a break today

It is becoming the rule rather than the exception for merchants, the hospitality and transportation trades, and others retailing wares and services to offer discounts to seniors. If you are not benefiting from this, you had better start checking.

As late as last year when I reported on discounts for senior shopping, I told of individual companies and a few chains offering a percentage off their regular prices, some only on special days or at special times. Now the thing has started to snowball and is becoming widespread.

For example, the Senior Citizens Advisory Council of St. Catharines started the new year by canvassing merchants on behalf of oldsters in the area. By May over 60 stores had agreed to sell to seniors at reduced prices, ranging as high as 25 per cent off.

In Downsview, Ontario, The Centre for Creative Living is meeting with similar success in an ambitious program to bring both local and national companies into their Senior's Discount Plan with discounts, offered by some 100 firms, ranging from five to 30 per cent.

With the help of a grant from New Horizons, the Centre has produced a purse/pocket-size, looseleaf binder containing details of each merchant's offerings and an ID card which may be required by retailers before granting reductions. (Many merchants, hotels, restaurants, entertainments,parks, etc. simply accept your federal or provincial Senior's Privilege Card.)

As new retailers join the movement or changes are made in discount rates, etc., the Senior's Discount binder is updated. A charge of $1.50 is made for a senior's registration which includes an up-to-date copy of the binder, an ID card and future mailings of additions and changes.

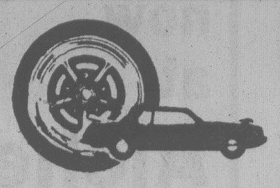
Most of the companies listed are in or near Downsview and so the discounts are of chief interest to senior people living in that area. However the idea is so good that seniors' clubs elsewhere may want details. If your club would like a copy of the binder, ID card, an informative sheet titled "The Senior's Discount Plan", plus answers to specific questions, send $2.00 ($1.50 plus 50 cents handling) to Mrs. Ida Lipson, The Centre for Creative Living, 15 Hove St., Downsview, Ont. M3H 4Y8.

Both the above successful programs are based on the premise that it is profitable business for merchandisers to offer discounts on goods, services, car rentals, hotel rooms, meals and the like. Don't feel that this is a begging operation or that companies should do this just as a public relations gesture — like taking an ad in the school annual.

The smart merchant will look on this as a reasonable and effective form of promotion for his offerings. Major car rental firms offering as much as 30 per cent off, motels and hotels as much as 25 per cent off are not in business for their health. They know that seniors provide some of the best word-of-mouth advertising they can get.

And we seniors are more than justified in doing all we can to stretch our shrinking dollars to make ends meet.

Send comments and questions (stamped, addressed envelope for reply) to Victoria Times, c/o Box 1506, Guelph, Ont. N1H 6N9.



WHEELS

by Mike Lamm

DEAR MIKE: It's becoming harder and harder to find high-test gasoline for my 1965 Corvette 327, 350 bhp. The engine has an 11:1 compression ratio. What can I do to make this car burn available fuels? — KNOCKING

DEAR KNOCKING: First, look into the possibility of running aviation gasoline in your Vette. I wouldn't have suggested this until recently, but in my area (California), aviation at present sells for $1.03 a gallon. With premium costing upwards of 95 cents, aviation fuel looks pretty good. Even so, I realize it might not be $1.03 by the time this column reaches print. As for adapting your engine to lower octane fuels, you can: 1) retard the timing, or/and lower your compression ratio by installing thick or double head gaskets. And yes, these modifications will cut into your car's performance.

DEAR MIKE: I've been having to get the valves ground in my 1973 Toyota pickup every 10,000 miles. I bought the car used at 50,000. Since then, the valves have been ground three times, each time by a different shop. The head is not warped. This condition has local mechanics baffled. Hope you can offer a solution. — BATTLE OF THE VALVES

DEAR BATTLE: A vacuum leak might be letting cold air hit a hot valve, thus warping it. Or perhaps the valves aren't rotating as they should. A third but unlikely possibility is that they're being adjusted too tight.

DEAR MIKE: Would E78-14 rear tires on my Nova 6 give me more power than my present F78-14s? — READY TO RETIRE

DEAR READY: Yes, a tiny bit — because the E78s are smaller in circumference and thus amount to a lower gear ratio. On the other hand, the F78-14s will give you a tad more gas mileage. But the tires are so similar in size that you most likely won't notice any difference at all.

DEAR MIKE: The starter in our Datsun is on the fritz. When I hit the key, the starter spins but doesn't engage. This usually happens several times before it catches. A new starter is out of the question. It costs $90 plus installation. Should I buy a rebuilt starter or have this one rebuilt or get one from a wrecking yard? What's your advice? — SPINNING

DEAR SPINNING: Sounds like a dirty Bendix. First remove your present starter and clean and oil the exposed gear on its shaft. Try that before you buy anything. If that doesn't do it, though, I'd recommend a starter from a wrecking yard over a rebuilt one.

You're invited to send your automotive questions to Michael Lamm, Box 7607-B, Stockton, Calif. 95207. Not all questions can be answered personally. Those of broadest reader interest will appear in future columns.

The newspaper reported in its today's editions that the "red-line" notebook was discovered in a briefcase full of papers recovered from Paisley's boat last October, a few days after a body Maryland State police said was his was found floating in the Chesapeake Bay.

State police said they believed Paisley committed suicide. Maryann Paisley has questioned whether the body was really that of her husband.

State police and Mrs. Paisley said the notebook contained numbers and names in the former intelligence officer's handwriting, The Sun said. The book bore a strip of red tape along its left edge — a marking the newspaper said indicates it must never leave agency headquarters and must be kept in a safe.

The notebook contained secret telephone numbers which connected with U.S. intelligence-gathering operatives, said unidentified CIA sources quoted in The Sun.

The CIA has said Paisley was doing routine weapons-analysis work at the time of his disappearance but The Sun said discovery of the phone book suggests he may have been involved in covert operations.

Herbert Hetu, a CIA spokesman, said the claim is "ridiculous."

"Sure they found a notebook with a few phone numbers in it but nothing top-secret," he said. "It's unbelievable. That's irresponsible."

Taking such a notebook outside of headquarters in Langley, Va., is considered a security breach, the newspaper quoted CIA sources familiar with the agency's communications system as saying.

The CIA says Paisley never worked in counterintelligence but The Sun said a six-month investigation disclosed a different John Paisley.

The newspaper quoted sources as saying Paisley regularly interrogated dissident emigrants and political defectors from the Soviet Union to try to sniff out Soviet spies and double agents.

The sources said Paisley was approached by agents for the KGB — the Soviet counterpart to the CIA — and was asked to become a double-agent. The offer allegedly took place during the second round in the strategic arms limitation talks in Helsinki, Finland.

The KGB, the sources said, wanted information about the U.S. negotiating position. The sources said that when Paisley reported the contact to his superiors, he was advised to "take the pitch."

Paisley then fed information to the KGB about the U.S. fallback position in the SALT negotiations and about how the U.S. intended to "cheat" on SALT, The Sun quoted the sources as saying.

The Sun also said Paisley was involved about five years ago in an agency-wide search for a well-entrenched Soviet double-agent, or "mole," who had penetrated the highest levels of the CIA command.

"Paisley may have gotten caught in the middle," suggested one of The Sun's sources. "Maybe he learned who the mole was. Or maybe he stumbled across some piece of information which might have led to the mole — and which made him an instant liability."

Fun park train blaze kills seven

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A fire broke out in the Ghost Train ride at a Sydney amusement park Saturday night and at least seven persons were killed.

Firemen sifted through the debris of the train ride, which went through a darkened tunnel, in search of other victims.

DACCA (Reuter) — Bangladesh may face famine if rain does not end its worst drought in 40 years soon, according to a government report.

Vast areas of the country lie parched, and ponds and streams used for irrigation have dried up.

Exactly how much of the country has been hit by the drought is not known, but the government estimates that nearly one-third of Bangladesh's 14.4 million acres of arable land have turned into waste ground.

The water in the Kaptai Dam, the country's largest hydroelectric power station, is at an all-time low and electricity supplies to Dacca and elsewhere are seriously threatened.

The drought has not claimed any deaths so far in this land of 85 million people, but the memory of the major crop failure in 1974, which helped to topple the government of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman the following year, still haunts Bangladesh.

People are pinning their hopes on the monsoon which already is late. If it fails, President Ziaur Rahman will find himself in grave trouble.

I THINK ITS A CRIME THAT local establishments offer us working class people the services of a bank in able to spend a hard earning dollar. Example: A local establishment said to me that they could cash my cheque if I waited 10 minutes and offered me a 20 advance for my uncashed check. Then made up excuses for not being able to cash my check after one hour. So Please Beware. Dennis Jeanneault.

CITY WATCHDOG RICHARDS Report #112. Congratulations to Sgt. Bryan Bailey on his excellent suggestion that each police patrol car be supplied with a taperecorder which would save approximately 30 to 40% of officers time spent making out reports. Your City's Watchdog spent 3 hours at the special Police Board meeting at City Hall on Thursday and found it most interesting and will have further comments regarding the meeting at a later date. If you wish further information regarding City matters please phone 383-6259 C. Joe Richards or write to PO Box 154. Seen-in-passing: a cyclist courteously informed Your City's Watchdog on Friday afternoon that one of his brakes lights was not working, and then proceeded to ride through 2 red lights on Government Street. Therefore Your City's Watchdog suggests that instead of one police car patrolling the downtown area that the 2 officers be supplied with 10-speed bicycles so they can enforce cyclists to obey the traffic rules and stop them from riding the sidewalks at high speeds. This is a danger to pedestrians especially Senior Citizens who are unable to get out of the way of speeding cyclists. Postscript: Anyone who wishes to receive 10¾% interst on any surplus funds they may have, can do so by contacting The Victoria Public Savings Credit Union immediately.

HOW TO WRITE
CLASSIFIED ACTION
AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

A little ash a boon to carnation

GARDENING
Hilda Beastall

The many kinds of Dianthus may still be grown by local gardeners under various names — carnations, border pinks, border carnations, perpetual carnations but they don't often turn up at June flower shows. Even a few of a scented kind are worth having in a spot of sunshine near a relaxation space in a garden.

The perfume should be "free on the air." An Irishman of our acquaintance who was an eager collector of these plants demanded that their scent should greet him from his garden as he turned off the main thoroughfare. The distance was at least six full lots of 60 feet each frontage.

Whatever kinds of Dianthus you may be growing, from the low mat-forming alpines to the taller cut-flower hybrids, they are likely bearing their first flower buds in June. June is indeed the month for pinks and carnations. Growth will be rapid and flowers plentiful in healthy soils.

The Dianthus Family in general likes an open, well-drained soil, with sufficient humus to hold moisture yet never be soggy. An acid peat moss must not be used as humus, for these plants prefer a slightly limed soil.

A bed of soil held up by a rock wall is ideal, as are planters filled with specially made-up soil mixture of well-rotted compost, sharp sand and a touch of lime.

Just at this season, wood ash will act as a tonic to all Dianthuses. Apply this as a side dressing, then water it in to carry the minerals to the root area. Improvement moving faded flowers, make the cut full length, down to in color of foliage and flower will be soon noticed.

The wood ash can be from fireplace or outdoor burning of branches but not incinerator ash which today is likely to be too much of a mixture of plasticized cartons and similar materials.

Wood ash containing small pieces of charcoal is particularly useful in improving heavy soils of clay. It should be added in small quantities as a top dressing while it is fresh. Afer being leached by rain over winter it is of less value to plants but still useful as an improver of the soil texture. Straight wood ash with litle or no small pieces of charcoal benefits a light-sandy soil because it holds moisture in the soil, but it should not be used around carnations or pinks outdoors late in fall or during the winter.

The tonic value of wood ash for Dianthuses comes from the minerals it contains, mainly potash and lime which are readily soluble in water and thus account for the improved appearance of the plants within a few days. This is why the ash is useful just at the peak of growth now in June.

An important point in maintaining a continuity of flowers on outdoor carnations and in getting strong bushy growth to go through the winter is to cut the flower stems long. Even when re- where the stem comes from a tuft of leaves near the base of the plant.

In varieties which have several flowers to a stem and the stem is not cut for indoor use, the flowers may, of course, be nipped off separately as they fade. Leave the stem cutting until no flowers remain to open. Then cut as advised as above.

Full healthy bushy carnations and pinks go through the winter better than sprawling weak plants. So desirable for color, form and fragrance, they are worth treating well at flowering time.

Behavioral 'key' discovered

By Harold Schmeck Jr.

NEW YORK — New discoveries have revealed surprising links between the chemistry of behavior and that of other body functions in humans and animals.

Chemicals of a group called peptides, long known principally for their actions on blood vessels, the kidneys, temperature regulation or other functions outside the brain, have been found to perform key roles in signalling within the brain and in the control of such perceptions as thirst, pain, emotion and perhaps even memory.

The new research in laboratories throughout the world is altering scientists' concepts of the chemistry of the central nervous system and is demonstrating that the brain's system of signalling within itself and to all parts of the body is even more intricate and various than had been thought.

Some of the new findings offer possible explanations for the differing actions of drugs on the brain as well as hints concerning the chemistry of some puzzling diseases.

Many of the new concepts and discoveries were described recently at a three-day conference at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md. It was the first of nine major meetings on peptides in brain chemistry that have been scheduled around the world this year and early next.

In one study reported at the conference, a chemical extracted from the urine of mental patients caused rats to fight so violently that scientists found four of them dead in one cage and the sole survivor licking his wounds only a short time after injections of the substance had been made.

In another experiment, a substance extracted from patients who have the bizarre illness called anorexia nervosa, produced an aversion to food that lasted for weeks in laboratory animals. Patients suffering from anorexia nervosa seem to have a compulsion against eating.

Both of these still-unexplained effects were reported by Dr. P. D. Edminson of the Pediatric Research Institute, Rikshospitalet, Oslo.

New reports on many aspects of the new brain chemistry "really constitute an explosion of information about the variety of different peptides acting in the nervous system," said one participant at the end of the conference.

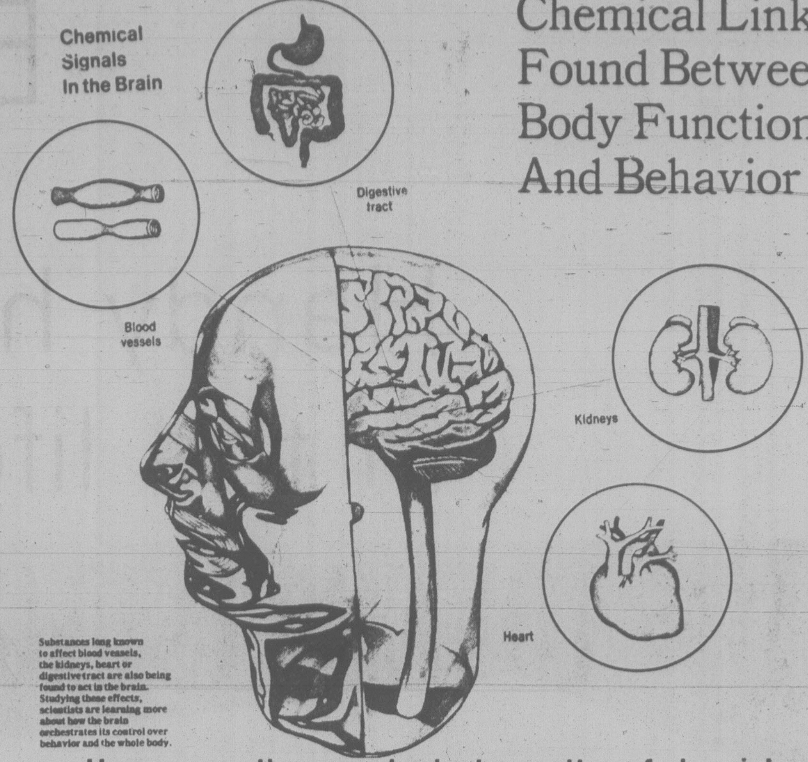
Peptides are relatively short chains of substances called amino acids, which constitute the building blocks of all proteins. Peptides came into sudden prominence among brain scientists about five years ago with the discovery of chemicals called endorphins that appeared to be the brain's own internal equivalents of morphine. The endorphins, which are peptides, appear to be key factors in the brain's perception of pain and may also be involved in the chemistry of pleasure and emotion.

Perhaps the oldest known peptide to have emerged as an important factor in the newly recognized brain chemistry is Substance P discovered by a Swedish scientist, Dr. Ulf Von Euler, in the 1930's but never thoroughly understood in terms of structure and function until the 1970's.

The chemical structure of Substance P was worked out about a decade ago by Dr. Susan Leeman, then at Brandeis University, but the chemical's role in the functioning of the brain remained obscure. Recently, scientists have found evidence that Substance P may be the chemical that actually conveys the signals the brain understands as pain.

In studies not yet published, Dr. Fred Lembeck of the University of Graz in Austria has demonstrated that Substance P also acts at sensory nerve endings in body tissues in response to injury or painful stimuli such as heat, cold or corrosive chemicals. Under such circumstances, the research shows, Substance P dilates blood vessels. Thus the substance, only recently found to have anything to do with pain, may have two vital roles: signalling pain's warning to the brain and increasing blood flow to help endangered tissues dissipate and dilute the poison or other source of injury.

Chemical Links Found Between Body Functions And Behavior



Substances long known to affect blood vessels, the kidneys, heart or digestive tract are also being found to act in the brain. Studying these effects, scientists are learning more about how the brain orchestrates its control over behavior and the whole body.

Gassy Jupiter solar hot spot

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — The planet Jupiter has a balloon of gases surrounding it that is 100 times hotter than those spewn off the sun's surface, scientists report.

The largest planet in the solar system is inside an envelope of charged particles, with a temperature of 350 million to 400 million degrees Celsius, 100 times hotter than the corona of the sun, has been discovered around Jupiter by a Low Energy Charged Particle experiment on the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Voyager I spacecraft.

The presence of the super heated plasma was reported by Dr. S. M. Krimigis, principal investigator on the experiment and head of the Space Physics and Instrumentation Group of the Johns Hopkins University Applied Physics Laboratory in Howard County.

"As soon as we (Voyager) crossed the boundary between Jupiter's magnetic field and the solar wind at some three million miles (4.8 million kilometres), we detected the plasma envelope," said Krimigis. "... and it seems to occur in most of Jupiter's magnetosphere ...."

Jupiter's gas cover probably acquires its energy from the interaction between the planet's rapidly rotating magnetic field and the solar wind, Krimigis explained.

"This Jovian plasma is probably the hottest thing in the solar system," said Dr. George Gloeckler, co-investigator of the Low Energy Charged Particle from the physics department at the University of Maryland.

Voyager I now is about 80 million kilometres from Jupiter and will approach Saturn on Nov. 13, 1980. Voyager I was launched from Cape Kennedy, Fla., on Sept. 5, 1977, and approached Jupiter on March 5, 1979.

Voyager II, launched from Cape Kennedy on Aug. 20, 1977, will approach Jupiter on July 9.

Quick end seen to Mexico oil fire

CIUDAD DEL CARMEN, Mexico (AP) — Specialists fighting an oil well fire in the Gulf of Mexico 80 kilometres east of here say they may be able to put out the blaze sooner than they expected.

Engineers on the Tolteca, a tender ship anchored a few hundred metres from the blaze and now being used as a base for examining the underwater well, say the well's pipe is intact and that a submarine crew has located blowout-control valves.

Klaan de Vries of the Netherlands, superintendent of operations on the Tolteca, said if the valves are still functioning, hydraulic lines can be attached to them and they can be activated to shut off the flow of oil and natural gas.

However, he warned that such attempts have often failed previously on other runaway wells.

An estimated 30,000 barrels of light crude oil a day is gushing from the well through burning natural gas on the surface of the sea.

The rust-brown oil stain is being carried westward by winds and currents, but officials of the government oil monopoly, PEMEX, say there are no reports so far of the oil hitting beaches or damaging marine life.

PEMEX engineers are considering drilling a relief well into the runaway well to bring it under control.

This would cut off the flow of gas and oil through the old pipe and channel it into the new one. But they estimated it would take up to three months to do.

A new drilling platform — the Aztec — has been moved to within one kilometre of the burning well and will be used for drilling the relief well if necessary.

Drilling activity is heavy in the Akal and Nohoch oilfields off the coast of this shrimp-fishing centre. The town is crowded with oil specialists because of the petroleum discoveries, and more are arriving daily because of the burning well.

Among them is (Red) Adair, the Houston, Tex., a specialist in fighting oil fires. Adair and many other experts refused to talk with reporters.

The well, a test-hole drilled three kilometres down into the seabed, caught fire June 3 when natural gas and oil surging from the well came into contact with sparks from an electric motor and exploded. The 63 men on the platform were removed unharmed.

Leak shuts pipeline

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. shut down the 1,300 kilometre trans-Alaska oil pipeline Sunday morning shortly after a leak was discovered about 265 kilometres south of Prudhoe Bay.

Alyeska spokesman Sam Akin said the size of the leak was not immediately known, but 20 to 40 barrels of crude had been recovered from the ground. More oil remained in the tundra and in Atigun River.

Akin said he didn't know when the line would be put back in operation.

The leak was located in Atigun Pass by a pilot flying for Alascom, a telecommunications company, Akin said. The seepage was later found to be centered in a buried portion of the pipe.

About 50 containment and cleanup crews were dispatched to the area in the Brooks Range, he said. At about 1,500 metres, Atigun Pass is the highest point of the pipeline route.

Fred Gunther of the state Department of Transportation said the North Slope haul road which parallels the pipeline from Fairbanks to Prudhoe Bay was closed for a few hours at the Yukon River bridge to provide exclusive access for Alyeska work crews.

The line which began pumping North Slope crude from Prudhoe Bay to the marine terminal at Valdez in June 1977 has been shut down only four times before this incident.

The flow of oil was halted Sunday soon after the leak was reported to Alyeska. Akin said oil north of the line was pulled back and placed in holding tanks at nearby pumping stations.

It could take "days or weeks" to determine how much oil seeped out before the line was turned off, Akin said.

But Akin said it was too early to say how severe the oil spill was. "I don't think at this stage there will be serious environmental damage, but, then again, I wouldn't want to stake my reputation on it," he said.

Excavation crews were working to locate the hole in the pipe near the summit of Atigun Pass, under less than ideal weather conditions, Akin said. Temperatures were near -1 and high winds were blowing sleet and rain.

Terrorist bullets slay Guatemala army chief

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — The chief of staff of the Guatemalan army, his chauffeur and his bodyguard were killed Sunday night. It was the third assassination of a prominent Guatemalan this year.

Unidentified men opened fire with machine-guns on Gen. Jose David Cancinos, 52, as his car was passing a fire station in the southeastern part of Guatemala City.

A police spokesman said the general was killed instantly. Firemen rushed from the station at the sound of the firing, but they were too late to help.

The assassins escaped in two cars, the spokesman said.

There was speculation that they were members of a leftist guerrilla organization opposed to the right-wing military government.

The other two prominent men assassinated this year were both leftist politicians and were believed to have been victims of right-wing terrorists.

Realtor denies he spied for Soviets

Frank Sale, a former Canadian soldier named by the Toronto Sun claims as a spy for the Russians before retiring to sell real estate in Victoria, was not receiving media callers this morning.

But in a written statement he said the charges against him are groundless.

A woman who answered the door of his apartment made it clear the handwritten note was as close as Frank Sale wants to get to the press.

"He won't see you. He has nothing to say," she said, holding the door slightly ajar.

The woman, who refused to give her name, said Sale denies being a spy; says the Toronto Sun's copyright story labelling him as one is inaccurate and that the charges against him are groundless.

The woman laughed at the accusation that Sale had been recruited by the Russian intelligence service KGB after being caught changing money on the Moscow black market.

The Sun reported today that Sale had planted bugs, informed on the weaknesses of other embassy staff and drawn floor plans of 'secure' areas while he was serving at the Canadian embassies in Moscow and Peking.

The paper — which misspelled his name as 'Sales' and incorrectly stated that he operates a real estate business here — said the KGB rewarded Sale with sex and money.

The story said there was no hard evidence to back the accusation and that Sale retired from the armed services on pension.

"They just want something scandalous to sell their papers," the woman at the door said of the Toronto paper.

The woman produced a statement from Sale and handed it through the door.

It said: "In 1968 I was taken out of the military service and seconded to the department of external affairs. I have spent three years in Moscow and worked as a consular official and from there I was posted to Peking, when we established relations and I assisted setting up the embassy.

"In the later part of 1973 I was posted in Germany for a year, then I came back to Ottawa to complete my 20 years to qualify for a pension and to retire. (I was) voluntarily and honorably released from the armed forces.

"The accusations are without ground — the record stands as to my previous employment with the federal government.

Sale, who works for the Canada Permanent Trust Co., lives in a spacious groundfloor suite in a rambling old mansion on Moss Street . . . a quiet tree-lined Fairfield street; and that's the way Sale wants to keep it.

SPORTS CAR crash in Victoria claimed life of William Weldon, 37, of Parksville, Sunday afternoon. Police said vehicle went out of control on Oak Bay Avenue and struck concrete wall and a fence.

Twister mows over Ontario

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A tornado struck 16 buildings in an industrial area Sunday night during a severe thunderstorm that swept across southern Ontario, police said.

At Honey Harbour, Ont., Bruce Jarlette, 21, of Midland, Ont., was killed by lightning on a 26-foot cruiser on Georgian Bay.

Provincial police said Jarlette was standing beside a citizen's band radio when lightning struck the aerial. An autopsy will be held on Tuesday.

No injuries were reported in Brampton but police closed off the industrial area temporarily to allow Ontario Hydro workers to repair electrical lines.

The storm stretched from Georgian Bay to Windsor. About 20 millimetres of rain fell within half an hour at Toronto International Airport. Winds of 80 kilometres an hour were recorded at London, Ont.

Moustapha El Hassani of Brampton narrowly escaped death when lightning flashed over his head as he put buckets under the eavestroughs of his house. He then watched as a large tree at the rear of his home went up in flames.

"The firemen came and put it out," said El Hassani. "I should be dead."

"The sky looked very black, just like smoke — it sounded like a bomb or something," said Emenuel Aguiar of Brampton, who was driving in a lane adjoining his automotive business when the twister struck.

Police said industrial buildings in a 100-metre by 300-metre area were damaged. They did not estimate the amount of damage caused.

The twister smashed windows, ripped up roofs and blew out a section of wall 30 metres long at a Chubb Securities Ltd. building. It picked up a boat and dropped it 65 metres away.

A police spokesman said there were some people in the factories when the tornado ripped through but no injuries were reported.

Tom G. Carson of Melancthon Township said his barn was smashed and debris was carried more than 200 metres.

London, Ont., was also hit as the storm uprooted trees, throwing them against homes and cars, and ripped off roofs.

Herman Riegger said: "It couldn't have happened. It only lasted a second, there wasn't enough time."

From the front porch of his home he could see a tree trunk squashing a car, a house chimney being thrown down onto another car, the back stairway ripped from a house and wires and trees scattered everywhere.

Beef to top $3.50

EDMONTON (CP) — Beef will cost an average of $3.51 a pound by 1981, calculations prepared by the Canadian Cattleman's Association show.

In addition, the figures show that Canadians will be eating less beef than they have for many years, but will be paying out a bigger part of their income to buy it.

Trucker protest turning uglier

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gunfire cracked over U.S. highways and a cattle truck was burned as angry independent truckers toughened their demands for a total shutdown of the trucking industry to protest rising fuel prices.

Six reports of sniper fire were under investigation by state police near Salt Lake City, where nails were found strewn over a canyon road Sunday.

Truck traffic had been all but shut down in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Utah, Tennessee and Montana by Sunday, organizers said.

In Montana, dozens of truckers stopped traffic on Interstate 90 west of Missoula. Some truck stops have been blocked since last week, said strike organizer Bob Whalen.

In other states, blocked truck stops created fuel shortages and discouraged many other haulers, organizers said.

The scattered shutdown has already been felt in some areas of the Midwest, where grain elevators were reported filling up and two meatpacking plants closed last week as haulers became scarce.

Meanwhile, Mike Parkhurst, president of the national Independent Truckers Association, said he will announce today what action his organization representing a 30,000 drivers will take.

The association is being pressed to lead a shutdown to protest against rising diesel prices and the 88-kilometre-an-hour speed limit.

Fighting flares up across Nicaragua

MANAGUA (AP) — Heavy fighting raged today in this Nicaraguan capital between President Anastasio Somoza's soldiers and Sandinista guerrillas trying to oust him.

The guerrillas also were reported battling Somoza's troops in the northern cities of Matagalpa, Esteli and Leon and harassing them in the south near Masaya and the Costa Rican border despite national guard claims of victory in the south.

Canadians have been advised by a Canadian diplomat to consider leaving the country, the external affairs department said today in Ottawa.

A department spokesman said the Canadian charge d'affaires in Costa Rica has informed the 45 Canadians remaining in Nicaragua to think of leaving or at least to arrange departure of their dependants. Canada has no embassy in Nicaragua; the embassy in Costa Rica is responsible for Nicaragua.

An attempt to evacuate about 50 U.S. citizens was called off today when heavy fighting blocked the airport road.

U.S. embassy officials said a truck sent to check whether a road to the airport was open ran into barricades of cars and heavy gunfire from both sides.

"The rebels are stopping cars, ordering the drivers out at gunpoint, then lining the cars up across the road," one official said. "There's shooting coming from both sides out there."

U.S. state department spokesman Tom Reston announced in Washington that embassy staff members have been ordered to send their dependents out of the country, and non-essential employees of the embassy also will leave. He said there were about 60 dependents, that some have already left and about 30 would go today.

Harmony halt

BLAINE (CP) — About 5,000 people gathered at the Canada-United States border Sunday to commemorate peace and goodwill between the two countries, but some of the motorists caught up in the festivities didn't share the feeling of harmony.

At one point, the lineup of northbound vehicles waiting to cross the border stretched five kilometres.

Among those participating in the annual event were boy scouts, girl guides, and war veterans.

Helmet decision puzzler

Bikers who took advantage of the ruling and hot weather to remove their helmets during the weekend found police in various cities were approaching the problem differently.

Police in Vancouver and the Fraser Valley didn't ticket bareheaded riders, but police in Victoria, Kelowna and Penticton did.

Provincial authorities were to meet today to consider the decision made by Burnaby Provincial Judge Selwyn Romilly and to decide whether to appeal.

Neil McDiarmid, associate deputy attorney-general, said he would discuss the ruling with motor vehicle branch officials before making a decision.

Romilly declared a section of the B.C. Motor Vehicle Act requiring motorcyclists to wear helmets null and void because no helmets have been officially approved for use in the province.

Massive fines, jail, in dredging fraud

TORONTO (CP) — Five prominent Canadian businessmen were sentenced to jail terms of two to five years today for their roles in defrauding public agencies of more than $4.3 million between 1967 and 1976 by rigging bids on dredging contracts.

Mr. Justice William Parker, associate chief justice of the Ontario Supreme Court, also sentenced eight companies to pay fines totalling more than $6.5 million for the parts they played.

The five businessmen had been charged along with six other businessmen and 11 of their companies with conspiracy to commit fraud by rigging bids for government dredging contracts.

The eight companies and five businessmen were found guilty May 5 following one of the longest, most complicated and costliest cases — estimated at $7 million — ever tried by a Canadian jury.

Harold McNamara, 64, former president of McNamara Corp. Ltd. of Toronto and a former sports writer for Montreal Gazette, was sentenced to five years and his company was fined $2 million. Both had been found guilty on all seven counts handed down in the Crown's indictment.

Jean Simard, 57, a former vice-chairman of Marine Industries Ltd. of Montreal and a member of the family that played a major role in Quebec's shipbuilding and construction industries, was sentenced to a three-year prison term. Simard was found guilty on three counts. The company, acquitted on one count, was fined $650,000 on the other two.

Sydney Cooper, 58, former president of Pitts Engineering and Construction Ltd. of Toronto, drew a three-year prison term for three guilty verdicts he faced. The jury could reach no decision on a fourth count.

Albert Gill, senior vice-president of Sceptre Dredging Ltd. of Richmond, and Frank Hamata, the company's president, each received reformatory terms of two years less a day. Both men and the company were found guilty on one count. The company was fined $450,000.

Other sentences handed down: Canadian Dredge and Dock Co. Ltd. of Toronto was fined $1 million; The J. P. Porter Co. Ltd. of Montreal was fined $1 million; Richelieu Dredging Corp. Inc. of Montreal, a Porter subsidiary, was fined $500,000; Pitts Engineering Construction Ltd. of Toronto was fined $1 million; C. A. Pitts General Contractors Ltd. of Toronto was fined $50,000.

The multi-million dollar fines were among the highest ever levied by a court in Canada.

Defence lawyers planned to make applications for bail pending their appeal applications. A bail hearing was set for later today.

In passing sentence, Mr. Justice Parker said the business world and the public must realize that such illegal acts will be dealt with seriously. He said people must be made to realize that such acts are not worth while.

Although he said he was aware of the large amount of publicity that surrounded the case, the length of the trial and its high cost, Mr. Justice Parker said that "the public has been defrauded and put to great expense to bring these accused to trial."

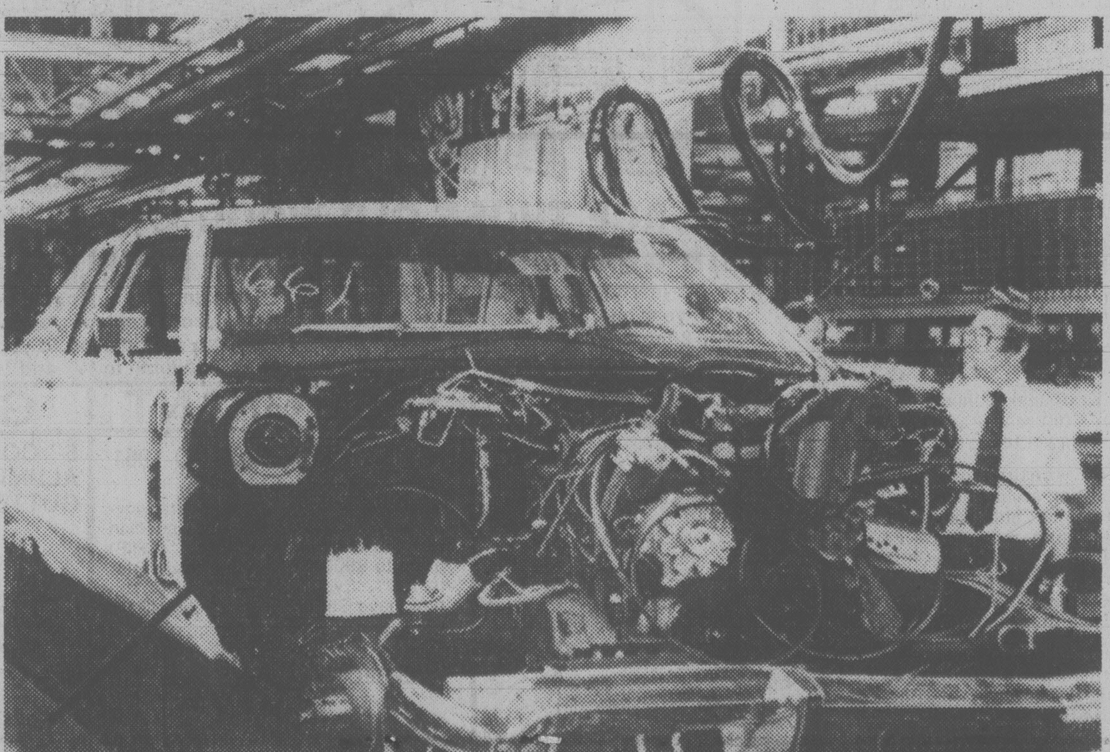
He said evidence at the LONDON (AP) — Closing gold prices Monday, in U.S. dollars an ounce: London-282.00; Paris-294.56; Frankfurt-281.86; Zurich-282.125; Hong Kong-279.43.



LAST OF THE LONGIES at Ford Motor Co.'s Lincoln-Mercury division plant in Wixom, Mich. — a 1979 Lincoln Continental two-door Town Coupe — works its way along the assembly line. The unit, No. 99Y5763622, is the last one of its kind to be built and the last really big car to be made in the U.S. White with a light-brown vinyl top, it's 19 feet, five inches long, lists for $11,476, and weighs more than 4,800 pounds ready to drive away. Only the Cadillac limousine, not a car for personal use, is bigger. Plant workers now are on a six-week layoff at 95 per cent of their base pay while Ford retools for 1980's smaller models. The new Lincolns are likely to be two feet shorter and more than 500 pounds lighter.

Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. MDT today at the Calgary public stockyards of 200 head were mostly replacement cattle with a few slaughter cows.

Trade was moderate on all available classes. A few 4H steers traded to $81. No slaughter heifers or D1 cows on offer. D3-5 cows sold steadily. No bologna bulls on offer.

D3-5 cows 53-57.

Good feeder steers over 700 pounds, sales to 95.75, common to medium 75-85. Good feeder heifers 500-600 pounds 95-101, common to medium over 500 pounds 80-90.50.
